Draft Filibuster Ties Up Senate

Dewey Wins Ga. Delegates In First Test With Rivals

National Committee Rejects Taft Group Despite Help of Stassen Supporters

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 18.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won a clear-cut victory over his avowed rivals here today, and strengthened his claim to being the No. 1. contender for the Republican presidential nomination.

The Republican National Committee voted, 48 to 44, to seat a Georgia delegation of 16 made up of Dewey supporters.

It turned down a delegation from the "Cracker State" favorable to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. The Taft people had believed the 16 delegates were in the bag.

Dewey Forces Exultant

The talk of Philadelphia tonight, however, was not simply that the Dewey forces had triumphed over the Taft forces in the GOP National Committee, but that they had whipped a coalition made up of Taft people and supporters of Harold E. Stassen.

The exultant cry of the Dewey camp tonight was:

"If Taft and Stassen can't beat Dewey in the National Committee, where can they beat him?"

The contest before the National Committee was the first outright battle between the Dewey forces on the one hand and the Taft and Stassen forces on the other. It may not have been a definite test of strength. For one thing, some of the Stassen committemen failed to line up with the Taft people.

Vandenberg Still in Picture

However, it was close enough to a showdown to make the Dewey strategists jubilant tonight.

Meantime, the stalwart figure of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan was very much in the GOP pre-convention picture. His admirers appeared to have succeeded in exploding the talk that he would say "no" in advance of the balloting and thus leave his supporters out on a limb.

The Vandenberg position now seems to be what it has been from the outset: He is not a candidate, will not connive to get the nomination, but will not turn it down if it comes to him.

The Dewey forces are obviously trying to "blitz" the convention—to gather up enough strength in advance of the balloting to head off a deadlock.

Claim Is Temporary

They rejoiced over the decision in the Georgia contest for two reasons besides their pleasure at whipping a Taft-Stassen coalition. It gave them 16 first-ballot votes which might have gone very well to Taft, and they hoped that it would have an important psychological effect on unpledged delegates who are simply looking for a winner.

True, Governor Dewey's claim to the Georgia delegates is temporary. The Taft managers intend to appeal, first, to the credentials committee, and, failing there, to carry their fight to the convention itself.

However, Herbert Brownell, one of Dewey's three campaign managers, expressed confidence this

Pilot, Wife, Daughter Die In Plane Crash

A 24-year-old man, his wife and young daughter were killed in the crash of a small plane on a farm near Upperville, Va., last night.

The man, John Robert Violet, piloting the plane, cracked up while apparently trying for a forced landing on the farm of P. Beatty Brown, 7 miles west of Upperville in Fauquier County.

Police said the family lived in Dover, Del., but formerly resided in Winchester, Va.

Virginia State Police at Culpeper expressed the opinion that Violet was running short of gas when he tried the landing.

Postal Pay Rise Passed by House

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the Rees bill to raise salaries of 480,000 postal workers a flat $450 each.

It now is a race with time to get final Congressional action on this bill and the companion measure to raise by $360 each the pay of 825,000 Federal and District classified employes. See Federal Diary, Page B-1.

Congressional Actions Vital To Convention

GOP Awaits Final Capitol Moves Before Writing Platform

By Alexander F. Jones
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 18.—Delegates to the Republican National Convention are pouring into Philadelphia, hotels are jammed to the roof, campaign managers for candidates are issuing the usual confident statements, workmen are pounding the last nails at the huge municipal auditorium.

Seemingly Philadelphia is the center of all Republican hopes and aspirations.

Actually every Republican leader here has an ear glued to a Washington telephone, or is anxiously seeking last minute reports on what Congress is doing.

Action of Congress Vital

For on what Congress does in the last hours before the convention opens on Monday depends the approach of the resolution committee to many vital questions that must be handled in the party platform.

It will be difficult to write a ringing foreign relations plank if the House succeeds in cutting ERP appropriations.

If the draft bill has been emasculated to any serious degree, the platform writers will have to pull their punch on national security.

If Congress adjourns without passing a housing bill, any GOP plank on this subject would not be very convincing to veterans.

School teachers and education generally would not look with favor on the GOP if Congress adjourns without action on Federal aid to education.

Campaign to Cite Record

So it is with many other important matters still on the Congressional calendar . . . or in pigeonholes . . .

President Truman has made strong charges against the record of the Congress.

Republican leaders here say the coming campaign will be waged on the record.

If Congress decides not to adjourn on Saturday and the convention adopts strong planks on the vital issues, it will be up to the Republican majority to go back to Washington and get action on all matters now undecided or face a barrage of Democratic ridicule.

It is easy to understand the anxiety felt at Republican headquarters here today.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg is due to arrive here Sunday and it is announced he will make a statement at that time. But it is pre-

Vandenberg Hits 'Sniping' By President

Senator Says Truman Subordinates U. S. Welfare to Politics

By the United Press

Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg last night accused President Truman of "partisan sniping" at a moment when all elements of the Federal Government should be dedicated to promotion of the national welfare.

Striking out on politics for the first time on the eve of the Republican National Convention, the GOP foreign policy leader struck hard at Mr. Truman's recently completed transcontinental "non-political" speaking trip.

"It's pretty early to subordinate the national welfare to partisan sniping," Vandenberg said.

Talk Televised

He spoke in a Life-NBC television broadcast, originating from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee room.

Interviewers asked Vandenberg for comment on the President's remark that the current Congress was "the worst" in American history

Vandenberg, regarded as a strong dark-horse candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, replied by saying:

"I don't believe I want to comment on the President's political potshot at Congress. It's pretty early to subordinate the national welfare to partisan sniping."

Recalling that Congress has spent the past few days in 15-hour sessions, Vandenberg said tartly:

"Congress hasn't shared the luxury of a presidential, self-serving political vacation at a moment when all elements of the Government should stay on the job."

"Proud" of Record

He said he was "distinctly proud" of the record hung up by the Republican-dominated Congress.

"I doubt that there ever has been a better one made," he said.

The Senate president sketched one-by-one the foreign policy accomplishments of the Eightieth Congress. He maintained that the huge, global foreign aid programs had "deprived aggressive communism" of the opportunity to "exploit human misery."

And the European Recovery Program, he said, represented the "best investment we can make."

$1.85 for Weekly Pass

Capital Transit Seeks to Raise Fare to 15c, 2 Tokens for 25c

By James E. Ficken
Post Reporter

Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked the Public Utilities Commission to increase bus and streetcar fares here to 15 cents cash, two-for-a-quarter tokens, and a $1.85 weekly pass.

Three-for-a-quarter tokens were eliminated May 8, 1947, when PUC granted the present straight 10-cent fare and $1.50 weekly pass.

No change was asked in the present 3-cent school fare or the system of free universal transfer, both of which were established by Act of Congress.

The company's petition was filed with PUC shortly after 4 p. m. by F. G. Awalt, CTC attorney. PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan received it without comment and said no date has been set for a public hearing.

The boost would increase the company's annual income by approximately $2,555,000, the sum needed to guarantee CTC a "fair return," Awalt said.

The raise is required, CTC said, to offset an employe wage increase, the mounting cost of equipment, and a drop in the number of passengers.

People's Counsel John O'Dea said he has not studied the petition but promised to "do the best I can to keep the rate as low as I can for the riding public."

PUC records showed that during the week ending May 10, 1947—the last week when 3-for-25 cents tokens were sold—a total of 2,010,853 tokens were used, 787,726 cash fares paid, and 177,111 weekly

Half-Million Quit Jobs in West Europe

Strike Total Now Nearly Million; 'Summer Offensive' Of Reds Is Feared

Paris, June 18 (U.P.).—More than 500,000 workers in England, France, Belgium and Italy walked off their jobs today, sending the number of western European strikers to nearly one million. Officials said the long-feared Communist "summer offensive" in Marshall Plan nations may be under way.

The strikes affected French rubber, metal, aircraft and automobile production, British shipping, Italian ship construction and metal production and Belgian iron, steel and ship production.

Belgian Communists urged all workers to put down their tools and go home.

The Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGT) was behind the French stoppages.

Rebel unions in England led the crippling dock strike, which threatened to result in the spoilage of thousands of tons of food.

Jules Moch, French interior minister, charged Communists with trying to sabotage French production. His declaration caused a near-riot in the French General Assembly and the session was recessed for 15 minutes to let tempers cool.

In France, 500,000 workers left their jobs an hour early to protest the way the government and police dealt with the riotous rubber strike at Clermont-Ferrand. Between four million and five million workers were expected to stage a brief strike tomorrow. Those who demonstrated today do not work on Saturdays, so they staged their protest a day early.

The port of London was paralyzed when several thousand workers joined dock employes already on strike. More than 100 loaded ships were anchored in the harbor. At one place, 4,500,000 eggs were rotting. Three hundred and fifty tons of tomatoes were in danger of spoiling. Enough meat to supply Britain's ration needs for two weeks—about 35,000 tons—lay in holds.

In Italy, 10,000 metal and shipyard workers at Venice struck to protest the firing of a total of 105 workers. The Marghera metal works was crippled by a strike of 7500 workers protesting the firing of 80 men. Twenty-five hundred shipyard workers walked out to demonstrate against the layoff of 25 men.

Workers at big chemical plants near Liege, Belgium, served notice they were going to strike at an unspecified time in sympathy with the 250,000 steel, iron and shipyard workers already out.

Disputes Bar Action on Foreign Aid

4 Hours Wrangling Results in Complete Disagreement Among Conferees

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

On the very eve of the scheduled adjournment, Senate-House disputes still blocked action yesterday on foreign aid funds and on an American loan to build the United Nations' headquarters in New York.

Conferees on the foreign relief and recovery appropriations broke up in complete disagreement after three hours of futile wrangling in the afternoon and an hour more in the evening. An informal agreement between Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg and House Speaker Joseph W. Martin seemed to be the only way to break the deadlock.

On the Senate side, at least, no responsible member could conceive of Congress quitting for good without appropriating funds for European recovery and other foreign aid programs.

Taft Stands With Vandenberg

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Republican Policy Committee said Congress would simply have to delay its adjournment if the conferees could not agree by tonight. Taft said he was "quite prepared to stand with Senator Vandenberg's view and carry out our moral commitment to Europe."

"That means a satisfactory agreement must be reached," he declared.

Vandenberg himself sat relaxed and confident in the Vice President's room while Senators came to tell him of the break-up of the conference. Earlier, however, in a broadcast extolling the record of the Republican Congress, he repeated grimly that Congress would do better to appropriate no money at all than too little.

"There is no sense in throwing a 15-foot rope to a man drowning 20 feet from shore," he said. "If it can't be a 20-foot rope, I would rather save the rope."

12 Months or 15

The foreign-aid conference broke up on one main issue: Whether to spread the spending of European recovery funds over fifteen months or twelve. Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee held fast for 15, the Senate group just as stubbornly for the 12-month spending period.

There were signs of an agreement in the afternoon, when Taber's Republican colleagues were reported to have deserted him. According to one informed report, Taber put his head in his hands

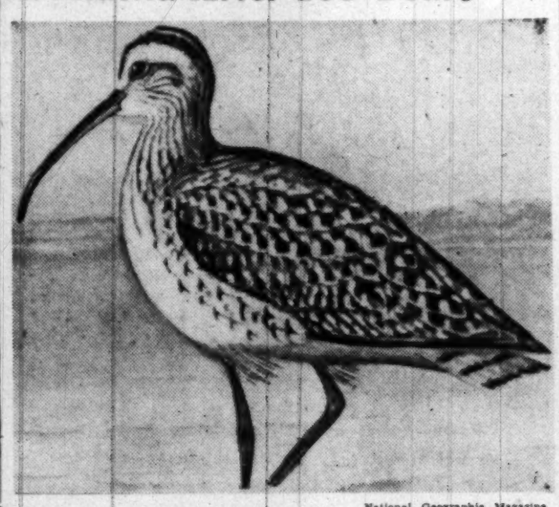
Ornithological Milestone

Curlew's Nest Is Discovered In Alaska After 163 Years



National Geographic Magazine

THE BRISTLE-THIGHED CURLEW

Breeds in south seas, nests in north . . .

With almost breathless brevity, the National Geographic Society yesterday flashed to the presumably anxious world the terse message:

"We have found the curlew's nest."

This declaration, which may take its place with deathless quotations like, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" and "Sighted sub, sank same," was wired to the tense society from a bird-hunting expedition somewhere "in the Alaskan wilds."

Seriously, though, the society ranks this news of the "bristle-thighed curlew" of outstanding ornithological import. It is the only North American bird, announced the society, "whose nest had never been found or described" in a 163-year search.

Late in May, Dr. Arthur A. Allen, professor of ornithology at Cornell University, who led the quest to find the nesting place and fledgling young of the b.-t. curlew, started on the expedition from Ithaca, N. Y., with his son, David Allen, and two Alaskan naturalists.

On June 1, Dr. Allen wired Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Georgraphic Society of the expedition's departure for the moss-covered foothills of mountains in southwestern Alaska.

The curlew hunters planned to employ Alaskan bush pilots to fly them to the curlews' suspected

Leaders Could Recall Congress

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Spurred by hope of breaking a draft-bill filibuster by dawn, the Senate Republican Policy Committee announced last night that plans had been made for an adjournment of Congress sometime today.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Senate's policy making group, said the Senate would suggest to the House that Congress adjourn until a definite date—probably December 31. He added that the Senate would propose an adjournment providing Congress could be called back by the four Republican congressional leaders.

Early today, however, while cots were being moved into the cloakrooms for weary Senators, Republican leaders expressed grave doubts that adjournment would be possible.

Besides the filibuster on the draft bill lasting longer than had been anticipated, Congress was faced with a disagreement on funds for the Economic Cooperation Administration and inability thus far to enact a housing program.

The leadership of both parties in the Senate were discussing a plan to return between the Republican and Democratic conventions with a definite adjournment date agreed on.

Still facing the weary Senators who were apparently in all-night session are a number of measures Republican leaders are desirous of rushing through.

Taft told reporters that speaking only for himself adjournment plans hinged upon the reaching of a satisfactory agreement with the House on funds for the European Recovery Program.

The plan to adjourn could be held up if a couple of men decided to launch a filibuster, Taft pointed out. In that event, he said, the Congress would probably come back for a few days after the GOP convention to finish its business.

Still facing the Congress is the question of what to do about a housing program.

Taft said that after some other measures are disposed of early this morning, he would ask unanimous consent to take up the House-passed Wolcott bill, and substitute the Senate's T-E-W bill and send both to conference.

If unanimous consent fails, Taft said, a new method must be devised.

The Senate expects to act on the

Cain Keeps Promise

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Senate Republican Policy Committee has listed the bill to raise a 2 per cent sales tax for the District among measures whose passage will be sought before adjournment, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) announced last night.

Taft explained, however, that the policy group had not listed the combination sales tax and high-level income tax as a major "must" item.

Action on the sales tax measure would be accompanied by action on pay raises for District Government employes, Taft indicated.

Pay Hikes Threatened

A Senate deadlock on the sales tax bill earlier raised the threat that no District employe will get a pay raise July 1.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) sponsor of the sales tax bill, saw the measure blocked for the third time by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.).

Cain Keeps Promise

In turn, Senator Cain carried out his earlier promise to hold up House-approved pay increase bills for Washington policemen, firemen and school teachers. He also held up Senate clearance of a bill to increase pensions for widows and orphans of policemen and firemen here. The pension bill was passed, but Senator Cain moved to reconsider it. The motion temporarily froze the bill in the Senate.

Finally, Senator Cain announced that he is ready to seek amendment of any Federal pay increase bill so that it would exclude all the District's 7500 classified employes. Their pay boosts are always carried in the pay legislation covering Federal classified employes.

Cain made clear that he is not opposed to the pay increase legis-

Housing Bill Passed by Big Margin

Measure Omitting Public Projects Now Goes to Senate

By The Associated Press

Republicans rammed a housing bill through the House yesterday, minus any provision for spending Government money on public housing projects.

A 318 to 90 vote put through the measure, which President Truman called "the real estate lobby's" bill. Backers of the legislation replied that it would help spur homebuilding without promoting "socialism."

What will happen now on housing is uncertain. The Senate has passed the long range Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill which contains the public housing feature.

May Yield to House

Some Senators have indicated they won't accept the House bill, but Senator Taft (R., Ohio) hinted he might yield to the House rather than have no bill at all. If the measure that gets to the White House resembles the House bill, President Truman could be expected to veto it.

The House bill provides for:

Renewal of Government mortgage insurance on new houses up to 90 per cent of value.

Priorities for veterans in buying war-built Government housing.

A speeded-up system of figuring depreciation allowances on new multiple dwelling units. This would mean tax reductions for rental housing investors. Mr. Truman said these people would be the only real beneficiaries of the bill.

T-E-W provisions for construction of 500,000 Government-financed housing units, subsidies for slum clearance and farm housing aids are omitted from the House bill. Critics called the Government-financed public housing projects socialistic.

Two-Thirds Rule Used

The 318 to 90 vote by which the bill sailed through the House was 46 more than needed under the two-thirds rule under which the House was operating. The Republican leadership invoked this rule to block any amendments from the floor. T-E-W bill backers in the

Russians Halt Traffic as New German Currency Is Created

Berlin, Saturday, June 19 (AP).—American guards at the Soviet-zone border on the only allied highway to Berlin said Russian guards had halted all allied personnel trying to reach Berlin this morning.

Berlin (Saturday), June 19 (AP).—The United States, Britain and France created a new currency for their zones in Germany last night and early today the Russians told German authorities traffic into Soviet-occupied eastern Germany had been halted.

The Russians acted, it was reported, to block an expected flight of worthless marks into their area.

German police said the Russian ban appeared to affect only rail and road traffic into the Soviet zone—not out of it.

The Soviet move came four hours after the western powers announced their abandonment of the old Reichsmark and the birth of the new Deutsche mark.

The western power plan of currency revision is unique in Europe's postwar money reforms. It is a "delayed-action" measure which leaves 45 million Germans in a perplexed state for a week until they learn the value of the new money. There were strong indications that 10 old marks would be exchanged for one new mark worth about 30 cents.

The reform is calculated to reduce the money in circulation and create a sound currency

Rumors that the revision was coming caused Germans to rush the stores in a spending spree yesterday. They cleaned out stores, formed lines at theaters and

21-Month Agreement Is Reached By Conferees

Langer Follows Taylor on Floor After Latter Talks 8 Hours, 34 Mins.

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senator Langer was still speaking at 3:15 a. m.

Senate - House conferees early today were agreed on a 21-month draft to begin next fall but a Senate filibuster was preventing enactment of the measure.

Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho) after talking 8 hours and 34 minutes, yielded the floor at 1:10 o'clock this morning to Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and the latter launched into what promised to be an equally effective stoppage of action on the draft. Senator Taylor said that after getting some rest he would return to relieve the North Dakotan and boasted that "we can run through without a stop until midnight Saturday."

Taylor began his filibuster in order to prevent appointment of Senate conferees to work out, with House conferees, a compromise of differences in the measures passed by the two houses.

However, while Taylor talked, the conferees met for some hours informally and were understood to have completed their report.

It is reported to include:

The Shaffer amendment delaying any inductions until at least January 31, 1949, is dropped. It was said that the draft would go into effect automatically sometime this fall.

(2) Fixing the term of draft service at 21 months, instead of two years as provided by the Senate and one year as voted by the House.

(3) Dropping a provision of the House bill permitting men of draft age to escape induction by enrolling in either the active or inactive service at any time before being called.

(4) The "foreign legion" amendment was dropped.

(5) Some form of doctors' draft was provided.

When Langer took over the floor from Taylor, Acting Majority Leader Wherry (Nebr.) pleaded with him to permit appointment of the draft conferees, but Langer refused. He did yield the floor long enough for the Senate to accept conference reports on two veterans bills and a measure to control stream pollution.

Minority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Ky.) denounced the filibuster, saying the apparent "futility and impotence" of the Senate was "a disgrace" to the country.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) sought Langer's permission to bring up the Government pay raise bill and the housing bill but Langer declined.

The North Dakotan then launched his own time-killing address at 1:46 a. m.

Reno Divorce, Hasty Marriage Bring Jail Term

A Greenbelt, Md., man was sentenced to 18 months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday as an example to others not to cut corners with Reno divorces.

Judge John B. Gray, jr., of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, imposed the sentence on Jack Slansky, 30, after refusing to grant a new trial for conviction of bigamy. The prosecution said Slansky had obtained a Reno divorce early in 1946 and remarried within five days after returning to Maryland, thus showing he had no intention of remaining a citizen of Nevada.

Slansky's lawyer then gave notice of appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals and Slansky was released on $1000 bond pending further court action.

Newspaper Workers Defy Czech Regime

Prague, June 18 (U.P.).—Five hundred newspaper workers defied the Communist regime in Czechoslovakia today and threatened to strike to protest the closing of Social Democratic publications. It was the first open defiance of the government since the Communists took over in February.

Newspaper workers called the meeting after an announcement that Pravo Lidu, 55-year-old Social Democratic organ, and the other party publications would be suspended after June 27 when the Social Democratic Party is merged with the Communist Party.

After a stormy three-hour session, the newspaper workers decided to postpone action until a delegation calls on Premier Antonin Zapotocky tomorrow.

Vice Premier Zdenek Fierlinger, a leftwing Social Democrat, said the newspapers were being closed so that newsprint could be made available for export, and that it would "make things better for all of us."

DR. CHEN LI-FU,

The Chinese government is receiving inadequate supplies from its "friends abroad" for its fight against Communists, while the latter have received not only men and equipment, but even arsenals from outside sources, particularly the Soviets.

Dr. Chen Li-fu, political lieutenant of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for a quarter of a century, thus described one of his government's greatest handicaps yesterday at a press conference arranged by Ambassador V. K. Wellington Koo at the Chinese Embassy.

Dr. Chen, who was elected on May 17 as vice president of the Legislative Yuan, the Chinese parliament set up by the new constitution, attended the recent Moral Rearmament conference in California.

He now plans to spend several weeks in this country to 'learn the democratic process" here, he said. He especially wants to see Pittsburgh's School of Mines in 1924 and then worked as a miner in Pennsylvania for more than a year.

Poles See Violations in German Pact

From Press Dispatches

Poland, apparently working with Russia in a new shift of foreign policy, protested formally to the United States, Britain and France yesterday against the six-power agreement on westrn Germany.

Polish Ambassador Josef Winiewicz, who delivered the protest to the State Department here, complained that the pact violated the Yalta, Potsdam and other agreements on Germany. It is aimed at restoring a limited form of home rule to western Germany and putting the Reich under international control.

The note charged the agreement was worked out by a group of western power representatives who were "not competent and not empowered to deal with the German problem." (Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands signed the agreement in addition to the United States, Britain and France.)

In the note to Britain there was a hint at the possibility of a Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers' meeting on Germany. The note said:

"Any difficulties in reaching agreement within the Council of Foreign Ministers cannot be insurmountable if all the countries concerned act in accordance with the Potsdam decisions."

bought anything they could. Many businesses closed and refused transactions in the old marks.

The Russian-controlled Berlin press declared the creation of a new money in western Germany meant the partitioning of Germany and "raising a barricade against the East."

These were among the main features of the revision announced so far:

The new money will not apply to the three western sectors of Berlin because that city is ruled by the Four Powers.

The 45 million Germans in the west will be virtual paupers for a week. Millionaires and beggars all will have exactly the same amount of money to spend in seven days.

For their first 60 old marks each person will be given 60 new Deutsche marks worth about $18. The first 40 marks can be turned in beginning Sunday in exchange for 40 new marks worth $12 and a promise of 20 more marks later. The first 40 marks is for spending money the first week.

During the week there will be a moratorium on all debts.

Starting Monday the Germans must turn into the banks all their other marks and fill out forms telling how they got their deposits.

After all these returns are in by June 26, the Americans, French and British will promulgate new laws telling the Germans what they will get for their old marks.

Greeks Send 5 Divisions Against Reds

Athens, June 18 (A.P.).—Greek army forces pushed westward under an air and artillery umbrella today as the biggest offensive against the guerillas rumbled into action.

Fghter planes, artillery and troops were active on a 40-mile front, running from the Albanian border south to Grevena.

Press dispatches said the army has already gained positions at the foot of Mount Grammos in north central Greece, where Markos Vafiades, chief of the Communist guerillas is believed to have headquarters.

Five army divisions were moved into position for the all-out campaign.

Dispatches from Salonika said army units moving into the Korona area, a half-mile south of the Yugoslav border, were machine-gunned from positions inside Yugoslav territory.

These dispatches said observers of the United Nations special commission on the Balkans witnessed guerillas crossing the border into Greece.

U. S. Gives Greeks Edge Over Rebels

President Truman said yesterday the Greek army has "great superiority" over the Communist-led guerillas, thanks to United States military aid.

But he warned that economic conditions in Greece are still "critical" and are holding up its post-war recovery.

In his third report to Congress on the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program, Mr. Truman said the United States, by the end of March, had poured 71 million dollars worth of military aid into Greece under the stop-communism program.

Included were a "substantial number" of planes, 75,000 weapons of all types and 7000 tons of ammunition, 2800 vehicles and the services of 256 United States military officers.

Position of Superiority

He said deliveries thus far have "placed the Greek army in a position of great superiority," enabling them to strike telling blows" against the rebel guerilla bands.

"Comparative casualties in the major engagments to date," he wrote, "have provided conclusive evidence of the inferior fire power of the guerillas."

The President made it clear that his optimism is confined to the military picture in Greece.

"While progress is being made in stabilizing the economy of Greece," he said, "the situation remains critical.

Retarding Factors

"Such factors as inflation, hoarded capital, the burden of supporting refugees and indigents, and general fears arising from unstable conditions continue to retard the economic recovery of the country."

As for Turkey, Mr. Truman said aid to that country is only now getting underway. He said only 30,000 of the estimated 300,000 tons of aid had been shipped by March 31, but that shipments are expected to average 40,000 to 50,000 tons monthly from May through September.

The President noted that both countries are bounded on the north by Communist-dominated states.

"Both are confronted by the same threat—the loss of their independence through direct or indirect Communist aggression," he commented.

Colombia Red Revolt Predicted in London

London, June 18 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail said today that Communists plan an uprising in Colombia July 20, when the Colombian congress will convene its regular session.

Richard Greenough, Daily Mail correspondent, said he left the Colombian capital because "Bogota censorship puts Colombia as much behind the iron curtain as any country in Europe."

Plaza Forges Ahead In Ecuador Count

Quito, Ecuador, June 18 (U.P.).—Galo Plaza, American-educated gentleman farmer, had a substantial lead today over his nearest rival for the presidency of Ecuador, on the basis of the latest official returns from the June 6 election.

The supreme electoral tribunal said the 42-year-old former ambassador to Washington had 68,151 votes to Conservative Manuel Elicio Flor's 60,354.

Sir Rama Rao Named Indian Envoy to U. S.

New Delhi, India, June 18 (A.P.).—Sir B. Rama Rao was officially designated today as Indian Ambassador to the United States. Rao, now in Tokyo as the head of an Indian liaison mission, will succeed Asaf Ali, who is becoming governor of Orussa Province.

Malaya Acts to Stop Wave Of Terrorism by Communists

Singapore, June 18 (A.P.).—A state of emergency was declared throughout Malaya today in an effort to halt a wave of terrorism allegedly caused by Communists.

Police were given broad powers and were authorized to recruit British army officers in Malaya whose terms have expired.

Four murders during the past 24 hours brought to 24 the total killed since trouble began seven weeks ago. Two cases of arson were reported since yesterday.

It was reported the Chinese government may ask Malaya authorities for special protection for Kuomintang Party Chinese. The shooting of Kuomintang Chinese in Malaya is blamed in official circles on Chinese Communists.

The Straits Times, leading British newspaper in Malay, said "Malaya's Communists have declared war against British rule." It estimated in a dispatch from Kuala Lumpur, the capital, that 5000 to 10,000 Communists are active in the campaign of violence.

House Votes Entry Of 205,000 DPs

The House voted yesterday to let 205,000 homeless European men, women and children come into the United States in the next two years.

The compromise measure, worked out by a conference of Senators and House members, then went to the Senate for final action.

Terms of Bill

Under its terms, the following entries would be permitted beginning next month:

200,000 displaced persons who meet stated eligibility requirements.

2000 persons who fled from Czechoslovakia after the Communists took over there last spring.

3000 orphans under 16 years of age.

In addition, 15,000 aliens who now are visiting in the United States would be allowed to remain, provided they came here before April 1948.

These are the qualifications for a DP: He or she must have entered the German or Austrian occupation zones before December 22, 1945. At least 40 per cent of the 200,000 must come from areas that have been annexed by a foreign power—which is to say, eastern Poland, Latvia, Lithuania or Estonia. And at least 30 per cent of the immigrants must be trained farmers who plan to work on American farms.

Critics Attack Bill

Some critics of the measure complained that it discriminates against Jews, many of whom did not arrive in Germany until early 1946, and few of whom are farmers by trade. Representative Javits (R., N. Y.) declared that the conferees who framed the compromise bill had "taken the worst features of both bills and put them into this."

Representative Fellows (R., Me.), floor manager for the bill in the House, said the compromise has a lot of features he doesn't like, but is "the best solution we can get."

Frank Goldman, Lowell, Mass., president of B'nai B'rith, yesterday issued a statement saying the conference report "substantially embodies the provisions of the Senate's Wiley-Revercomb bill, which President Truman described as discrimination against national and religious groups . . . In the 105 years of its existence, B'nai B'rith has never witnessed proposed congressional action so violative of American principles of equality and fair play. The vice of the bill is aggravated by its sanctimonious pretensions. In the guise of a humanitarian measure, we have a gratuitous insult to millions of loyal Americans, as well as a callous rejection of the pleas of innocent and worthy refugees."

Soviet Loses Ground on Jap Isle Veto

Lake Success, June 18 (AP).—Russia received a setback today in her fight to keep the former Japanese-mandated Pacific islands within reach of the Soviet veto.

Despite vigorous Russian opposition, the United Nation Security Council decided to consult with representatives of the Trusteeship Council on arrangements for transferring some of the responsibility for the American-administered islands to the trusteeship body.

Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko contended the Security Council itself must supervise the islands, since they are designated as "strategic areas."

The Council did not vote on the actual question of giving the Trusteeship Council part of the supervisory responsibility. The vote for preliminary consultations with a three-member trusteeship committee, however, was 9 to 1, with Russia abstaining. The one negative vote was cast by the Soviet Ukraine.

The Council will take up the question again next Friday.

Senate Gets 12 Names for World Groups

President Truman yesterday sent to the Senate for eleventh-hour confirmation, 12 nominations of prominent Americans to represent this country in international organizations.

Topping the list was W. Averell Harriman, named by the President to be United States representative in the Economic Commission for Europe of the United Nations Economic and Social Council. Harriman is also American Ambassador-at-large for the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Frank C. Squire was nominated by the President for a second five-year term on the Railroad Retirement Board. Squire was a valuation engineer for the Association of American Railroads in Washington prior to his first term.

UNESCO Nominations

Five delegates and five alternates, were named by the President to be American representatives at the third session of the general conference of the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization, (UNESCO), to be held from October 18 to November 10.

Delegates named were:

George V. Allen, former American Ambassador to Iran and now Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs. Allen, a native of Durham, N. C., and former newspaperman, is a professional diplomat.

Milton S. Eisenhower, brother of Gen. Dwight "Ike" Eisenhower, who was chairman of UNESCO's last session. Five years before his brother Ike became president of Columbia University, this year, Milton was made president of Kansas State College.

Luther H. Evans, librarian of Congress, who has served as an adviser to UNESCO. He is a former faculty member of Leland Stanford, New York and Princeton Universities and Dartmouth College.

Others Named

Dr. Waldo G. Leland, now vice chairman of the United States National Commission for UNESCO. Dr. Leland, an historian, is director emeritus of the American Council of Learned Societies. He lives here at 1862 Mintwood pl. nw.

Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick, New York Times staff writer and 1937 Pulitzer prize winner.

Alternates named were Frank Capra, Hollywood director and producer; William H. Hastie, Governor of the Virgin Islands and former dean of Howard University Law School here; Mrs. Kathleen N. Lardie of Michigan; W. Albert Noyes, jr., chemistry professor at Rochester University, and Dr. George F. Zook of Washington, president of the American Council on Education.

Jews, Arabs Awaited for Peace Talks

Cairo, June 18 (AP).—Count Folke Bernadotte arrived at his peace headquarters in Rhodes today to begin the attempt to set up a basis for a permanent Palestine settlement.

The U. N. mediator reached the Greek island after conferences in Cairo and Tel Aviv where he was given assurances that Arab and Jewish experts will be sent in the role of consultants to help him shape a peace plan. These delegations are expected in Rhodes on Monday.

The count said he did not expect he would have a proposal ready for Jewish and Arab consideration before a week.

He said it was too early to say whether top Arab and Jewish leaders would go to the Aegean island to talk peace.

He expressed satisfaction that the cease-fire was now functioning but said there may be some minor incidents in coming weeks.

In Tel Aviv, however, grave doubts were expressed that the truce would last more than another 10 days. Preparations were going ahead in Israel for any eventuality.

David Ben-Gurion, Israel premier, told the provisional parliament in Tel Aviv. The British evacuation of Haifa may take place before the end of the month, and "it is possible that this evacuation will serve as the signal for a new, sudden attack on the state of Israel, and particularly on Haifa, an attack by land, sea and air."

and told the conference sadly to do whatever it wanted.

A formula was drawn up keeping the Senate-approved European recovery funds intact on a 12-month basis, but with face-saving language to placate the House group. Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate group, hurried to Vandenberg with the draft.

Whether or not Vandenberg approved it, a hitch developed when the conferees reassembled in the evening.

"You'll just have to say that two immovable objects met," Bridges told reporters as he emerged from the meeting. "There was just no point at which we could get together. I'm sticking on the principle of a 12-month period."

He said no time had been fixed for a meeting today, and none would be held until some basis of agreement had been found—meaning, it was supposed, that the Senate and House leaders would have to agree and pass the word to their followers on the committee.

Every other item in the huge appropriation bill was dependent on settlement of the 15-month versus 12-month issue. Tentative agreement was reported to have been reacted on several items, among them 35 million dollars for the International Emergency Children's Fund instead of the 20 million approved by the Senate, and 225 million for Greek-Turkish aid instead of the Senate's figure of 250 million.

Bridges did not seem unduly perturbed as he left the meeting, and Senator Clyde Reed (R., Kans.), a member of the conference group, said the committee could "reach agreement in a matter of 15 minutes."

Reed said every issue had been disposed of except the time factor and "we aren't discussing that from any angle at all." He agreed with Bridges that the Senate group was not considering any compromise between the 12- and 15-month spending periods.

As for the 65-million-dollar loan for the U. N. headquarters, the Senate approved it yesterday but the House leadership still refused to let it come to the floor for action.

As a result, the fate of the loan and perhaps the permanent site of the U. N. hung in the balance. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee warned earlier this week that the U. N. might move to Europe if Congress failed to provide the money for building its permanent headquarters in the United States.

The Senate bill, passed yesterday without discussion, was amended by its sponsor, Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) to provide an advance payment of 25 million dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. A similar provision was included in the House bill so that construction work on the New York site could be started without further delay.

The House bill, sponsored by Representatives Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) also includes many other provisions previously passed as separate items by the Senate, among them a policy declaration paralleling the Vandenberg resolution for strengthening the U. N.

Eaton still professed to be hopeful yesterday of getting action before Congress adjourns. The prospects, however, were not bright, especially since House Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) has shown neither eagerness nor willingness to let the bill come to the floor.

Senate Votes Aid Bill For GI-Packed Schools

Schools with war-boomed enrollments would be eligible for aid from a five-million-dollar fund provided in a bill passed yesterday by the Senate and sent back to the House for action on amendments.

The House had provided six million dollars of aid and a wider range of school eligibility.

Senators Reject House Ousting of King and Nimitz

By the United Press

The Senate Armed Services Committee last night rejected a provision in a House bill to force retirement of Navy Admirals Ernest J. King and Chester W. Nimitz, both former chiefs of naval operations.

One member said the committee considered it an "unnecessary insult" to two of the Nation's top wartime leaders.

Neither admiral is on active duty. King is assigned to the office of the Secretary of the Navy; Nimitz to the Western Sea Frontier.

Poppy Memorial Stamp Bill Is Sent to Truman

The Georgia woman who originated the idea of the Flanders Field memorial poppy for the dead of World War I will be honored by the issuance of a special stamp, if President Truman approves.

Senate passage sent to the White House yesterday a bill calling for issuance of a special 3-cent stamp in honor and commemoration of Miss Moina Michael of Athens, Ga.

Vacillation by Congress Hurt U. S. Prestige, Bradley Says

Denver, June 18 (AP).—American prestige around the world has been dealt a serious blow by congressional vacillation in the last three weeks, Gen. Omar N. Bradley declared tonight.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a dinner of the national convention of the Reserve Officers Association, the Army Chief of Staff said:

"By our mincing steps backwards, by our timidity, by our inaction, our fluttering hearts—we have blundered into a costly retreat in this war of nerves and tension.

"But to counter-attack now before it becomes too late, the American people must put peace before their elections and show that they can live as bravely as they die."

This part of his text was inserted in an earlier prepared speech following his arrival in Denver.

Bradley also said in this inserted portion that "if we are to be squeamish in facing the facts of life," the United States would forfeit its position of world leadership.

In a message read by his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughn, President Truman, one of the founders of the association, said:

"A larger proportion of the defense budget should be allocated for the training of the civilian components. With the help of informed citizens, such as our membership, I hope that this can be accomplished."

The President added: "Our Nation cannot rely for defense on a regular military establishment both because of the expense and because it is contrary to our national tradition."

Air Force Buys 28 Giant Troop, Cargo Carriers

The Air Force has ordered 28 mammoth troop and cargo transports as running mates for its long range bombers.

Each can carry 222 fully equipped troops or a 25-ton payload 2400 miles without refueling.

The new sky freighters, known as C-124S, are 2½ times the size of the familiar C-54S used during the war.

Patterned somewhat after the Navy's famous LST landing ships, the C-124 has a built-in nose ramp which can be dropped to bring aboard or unload such heavy equipment as tanks, field guns, bulldozers and other material needed for the building and defense of advanced bases.

The plane also can be converted into a hospital craft to carry 123 stretcher patients, 45 walking wounded and 15 nurses.

The plane has a wing span of 173 feet, 3 inches, and is 127 feet, 2 inches long. With fuel and normal load it weighs 175,000 pounds, as contrasted to the C-54S total weight of 73,000 pounds.

U. S. Preparing to Double Fighter Plane Strength Abroad

The United States is doubling its fighter plane strength in Europe, Air Force officials said yesterday.

This will be done by shifting a unit of jet planes from Panama to Germany.

That unit—the Thirty-sixth Fighter Wing now stationed at Albrook Field in the Canal Zone—will leave about August 15.

At present there is only one group (about 75 planes) of P-47 World War 2-type conventional engine fighters based in Germany.

The Thirty-sixth Fighter Wing will double that strength. Moreover, it will mean that the United States for the first time will have an organized force of modern jet interceptors in that troubled area.

(Russia is known to have a number of jet fighters in her air force.)

An Air Force spokesman said that transfer of the fighter wing should be viewed as "part of normal training policy to accustom crews of all United States Air Force planes with operation in any part of the world."

A fighter wing is made up of a group of about 75 planes, plus supporting elements such as service, base headquarters unit and hospitals—a self-supporting organization.

A fighter group has a wartime strength of about 1800 men. A wing would involve several hundred more men.

Overstuffed Culture

Stockholm, Sweden, June 18 (U.P.).—As an example of "one of the flowers of American culture," the Communist newspaper Ny Dag yesterday printed the complete lyrics of the song "You Can Have Her, I Don't Want Her, She's Too Fat for Me."

Projects Resumed As Engineers End Nine-Day Walkout

Work on a number of construction projects was resumed yesterday as operating engineers ended a 9-day walkout.

A new contract providing an immediate 12½-cent-an-hour pay increase and a similar raise effective September 1 was signed by representatives of the AFL Local 77, Oprating Engineers and employers. The agreement followed a three-hour parley with Labor Department Conciliator James A. Holden.

Among the projects which had been delayed by the walkout were Dalecarlie Reservoir, the Pan American Union Building on Constitution ave. and the University of Maryland Aviation Research Laboratory.

2-Year AEC Terms Are Voted by House

By The Associated Press

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill extending for two years the terms of present members of the Atomic Energy Commission. It is in conflict with the desires of President Truman.

The extension would run until June 30, 1950. Mr. Truman asked that Chairman David E. Lilienthal's term be extended five years, with the other four members being continued, one, two, three and four years, respectively.

The Senate called the two-year extender up for action Thursday night, but laid it aside for other matters in the adjournment rush.

Mr. Truman argued that not to extend the commissioners' terms the full period provided in the Atomic Energy Act would cast a "pall of uncertainty" over the program they administer.

Opponents said a shorter extension was wise, that then Congress could resurvey the accomplishments. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) also has said that the President to be elected in November should have some say about who is on the commission.

House Rejects Measure Carrying AEC Funds

The Senate yesterday passed, but the House refused to accept, a compromise $5,855,308,851 independent offices appropriations bill carrying $521,851,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Senate restored $20,000 of the $48,000 cut in atomic funds ordered originally by the House.

The bill now goes back to a Senate-House conference for a new try at adjustment of differences.

The Senate added $60,259,920 to the total approved by the House, but the bill still falls $444,760,149 short of what President Truman estimated the agencies would need during fiscal 1949.

The measure gives the Veterans Administration $5,125,309,000, the War Assets Administration 90 million dollars, Housing Expediter $15,172,100, Maritime Commission $102,187,751, and the Office of Defense Transportation $340,000.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) denounced failure to give the Atomic Energy Commission the 550 million dollars it asked. He deplored the Senate's "meat ax approach," and offered an amendment carrying the requested figure but it was rejected.

At the last minute, the Senate voted $450,000 for salaries and expenses of the Rural Electrification Administration. This would supplement funds previously voted the agency in the Agriculture Department appropriations bill.

FCC Inquiry Is Approved

The House Rules Committee yesterday gave speedy approval to a resolution calling for creation of a special five-man committee to investigate the Federal Communications Commission.

The Rules Committee whipped through a favorable vote, 9-1, only a short time after Representative Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.) introduced the resolution. Rules Chairman Leo Allen (R., Ill.) said that time will be found in the last-minute legislative log jam for House action on the resolution today.

The committee, under terms of the resolution, is given broad authority to investigate every phase of the FCC, including the commission's right to issue its controversial "Blue Book" two years ago. The "Blue Book" was a report of an FCC advisory group, which leveled criticism on the public service policy of the FCC and the broadcasting stations.

The probers are also specifically directed to find out whether the FCC has licensed or intends to license any radio station owned, controlled, or affiliated with subversive or Communist-front organizations.

Representative Harness said that among the things he was interested in was the reported granting of four licenses within two weeks to Edward Lamb of Toledo. Lamb, a writer and lawyer, is principal stockholder of a corporation that operates radio and television stations in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Lamb's writings on the Soviet Union were recently attacked in Congress by Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) who also took the occasion to criticize the FCC for issuing rado permits to Lamb.

Office Fire Discovered By Woman

The keen nose of a woman restaurant manager brought firemen early yesterday to the scene of a stubborn blaze in a dentist's office at 3433 Connecticut ave. nw.

The fire took several hours to bring under control and caused damage estimated at several thousand dollars.

Mrs. Alma Burke of 1412 Underwood st. nw., manager and part owner of the Uptown Restaurant, also located at the Connecticut ave. address, sniffed the air at about 1 a. m. in her restaurant. Smoke.

She had waitresses check the booths to see if any cigarettes had been dropped and to check the trash cans. No fire was found.

A half-hour later Mrs. Burke still smelled smoke and ordered a second search. Again nothing was found.

Mrs. Burke checked the electrical equipment, poured water on the trash cans—just in case. She finally decided it was a problem for the Fire Department to solve and called them shortly after 2:30 a. m.

Firemen located the blaze in the second floor office of Dr. A. J. Montzka. It had spread from the dentist's office through a partition to Hestor's Beauty Salon.

Pvt. William H. Mooney, 28, of No. 14 truck company, sprained his back when he fell from a showcase in the dress shop. He was in good condition at Emergency Hospital yesterday.

Strikes Scheduled for Sunday At Alcoa Postponed a Week

Pittsburgh, June 18 (AP).—Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers of America, said tonight that a strike of 18,330 employes of Aluminum Co. of America, called for Sunday midnight, has been postponed for one week.

Murray said the action was taken at the request of Cyrus S. Ching, director of the U. S. Department of Conciliation and Mediation.

He added that negotiations between the steelworkers union and Alcoa, looking toward a new contract, will be resumed Monday.

Alcoa plants with steelworkers contracts are located at New Kensington, Pa.; Alcoa, Tenn.; Edgewater, N. J.; Mobile, Ala.; Baden, N. C.; Detroit, Richmond, Ind.; Bridgeport, Conn., and Bauxite, Ark.

Filibuster Ties Up Senate

Short (R., Mo.) told reporters the group had tentatively agreed to scrap the House proviso postponing the draft until 1949 and let President Truman put it in effect 90 days after passage.

Gurney's Report Differs

When the group broke up for dinner sometime later, Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) indicated, that they had gone over the whole bill in an effort to reach "a meeting of minds," and hadn't "wasted their time."

Senator Robert A. Taft said the Republican leaders had decided to keep the Senate in session all night, if necessary, to break Taylor's filibuster.

Taylor began his filibuster at 4:36 p. m. yesterday. He said he had been "taken to task" by several Senators for persisting in his talkfest, but was willing "to take the responsibility" for his actions.

Later, the former "singing cowboy" noted that the conferees were meeting informally. He said he had expected to talk most of the evening to delay appointment of conferees. Then, after getting a night's rest, he said he had planned to resume his filibuster after the conference committee reported.

"I was prepared to talk until the Philadelphia convention opened if necessary," Taylor added. "Now I suppose when I collapse, and the conferees are appointed, they'll pull their report out of their hip pocket."

Earlier, the House passed a badly mangled version of the measure by a 283 to 130 rollcall vote. It was so loaded down with ham-stringing amendments that opponents crowed that they had "torn the heart from the bill."

Sponsors, however, hoped to patch the measure up in conference and get a satisfactory compromise through.

Major obstacles in their path were the Taylor-Langer filibuster and House acceptance of a strengthened draft.

All but one of the Senate-House conferees—as yet unofficial—favor the original bill. They want to get rid of the so-called Shafer amendment, which would postpone the draft at least until next February.

Proposed by Representative Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich) and approved by a 135 to 90 vote in the House, it would permit draft machinery to be established but delay any inductions pending a further trial of volunteer methods. An intensive recruiting campaign, featuring short-term enlistments, would be launched.

If it failed to fill up the ranks, whoever is President next winter could order the draft into effect.

The other major changes written into the bill on the House floor over the bitter objection of its sponsors would cut the draft term from two years to one. As the Senate bill provides for the full two-year period, the obvious compromise is 21 months. There were unconfirmed reports that this was favored.

House members of the joint conference committee were named by Speaker Joe Martin yesterday morning. They are: Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N.Y.) of the House Armed Services Committee; Short, the lone opponent of the draft in the group; George Bates (R., Mass.), W. Sterling Cole (R., N.Y.), Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), Overton Brooks (D., La.) and Paul Kilday (D., Tex.).

Senators slated to be named to the conference committee who have been meeting with the House group are:

Gurney, Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), Millard Tydings (D., Md.) and Harry Byrd (D., Va.).

Opponents attempted further delays when the bill was called up in the House yesterday morning, but the measure was passed and sent to conference under special end-of-the-session rules curtailing formalities.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (AL., N. Y.) tried to get the House to instruct the conferees to insist on the Shafer amendment and one year draft term, but was ruled out of order. Mississippi's Representative John Rankin supported him. This combination brought a quip from Short that "the day of miracles has not past."

All during the draft fight, in fact, the opposition has been led by some strange bed-fellows. They included Rankin and Marcantonio, Adam Powell (D., N. Y.) Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.), Leo Isaacson (AL, N. Y. and Robert Rich (R., Pa.) the extreme left and the extreme right.

Two rollcalls were taken on the measure in the House yesterday, a motion to recommit—defeated 283 to 125—and the vote on final passage.

On the latter, 138 Republicans joined with 145 Democrats to pass the bill. Ninety-eight GOP members, 30 Democrats and two American Laborites voted nay.

Most of the oposition votes came from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Montana, Utah and West Virginia Congressmen. In contrast only five members of the 17-man Michigan delegation voted against the draft.

All of the Maryland and Virginia Congressmen supported final passage of the bill.

Theater For Washington

With the passing of the National Theater into limbo or filmdom, the Capital of the United States will be without a single legitimate playhouse. The one structure which can more or less speedily be reconverted to remedy this lack is the old Belasco Theater facing Lafayette Park. The Public Buildings Administration has announced that it will receive bids for the rental of this structure. But the terms under which bids have been invited afford scant hope that the reconversion will become a reality. Elsewhere on this page, a correspondent analyzes in some detail the defects of these terms from the point of view of those interested in keeping the legitimate stage alive in Washington. We agree with him that the offer of the Public Buildings Administration to make the Belasco available will be no more than an empty gesture unless that agency acts to make private operation of the theater feasible and to insure that it will actually be operated in the interest of the community's cultural life.

There is no doubt at all that the people of Washington will support a theater which offers them first-class theatrical fare and which offers its tickets for sale on the nondiscriminatory, or American, plan. Several commercial entrepreneurs have expressed lively interest in operating such a theater here. So has the American National Theater and Academy which, through the Washington Art Center Association, has done much toward inducing the Government to make the Belasco available. ANTA is perhaps peculiarly qualified to meet the drama needs of the National Capital. It was chartered in 1935 by Congress for the purpose of stimulating interest in the drama and bringing to all Americans their heritage of the past, the best of the present, and to aid the development of better drama in the future through its academy. Many of the most distinguished American dramatists, actors and producers are among its officers and directors. Washington would be an ideal home for ANTA. And ANTA would be an ideal custodian of a Washington theater.

It was Washington's need which prompted the Public Buildings Administration to offer the Belasco for rent. That need should not now be ignored in the selection of a tenant. It is a far more important consideration than the amount of income which the Government can glean from the lease. Its merits, indeed, on the part of the Government which has its site here, affirmative and sympathetic and generous help.

Fewer Crashes

Apparently no known safety measure would have prevented the crash of a United Airlines DC-6 on a Pennsylvania mountainside. Reports indicate that the tragedy was caused by motor failure, which is something that can happen to any plane. Although a precise assessment of blame will have to wait the outcome of the official investigation, there is no reason as yet to conclude that the disaster resulted from any defect inherent in the DC-6.

Despite the horror of the crash that cost 43 lives, it is notable that the airline safety record so far in 1948 is greatly improved over last year. Fifty-two persons have been killed in commercial airline accidents this year; at the same date in 1947 the toll stood at 152. How much of this difference is due to luck and how much to augmented safety precautions is hard to say. The year 1947 was of course the worst in airline history, and it did consequent damage to airline revenues.

These very financial difficulties have impeded installation of electronic safety aids which, though they probably would have had no bearing on this case, would help to avert crashes of the types most common in the past. Indeed, this is the point on which the airlines are most vulnerable. For while the quality of air transportation has been measurably enhanced by the addition of DC-6s, Convairs and Martin 202s, there has not been a corresponding improvement in mechanical safety and navigation devices. Small appropriations have made ground safety improvements by the Government agonizingly slow.

Although the airlines may not have exerted themselves as much as they could in this direction, however, there remains the one aviation inexorable—the law of gravity—against which no measures are likely to avail. The very nature of air transportation is such that when crashes occur they often are fatal to a relatively large number of persons and hence are more spectacular than most land mishaps. It is well to remember this fact in looking at air casualty figures, which tend to be much more impressive than the great number of passenger-miles flown speedily and safely every day.

Bilateral

Bilateral agreements with Marshall nations in Europe have been floating around the world for emendation prior to final drafting. They are in the nature of what has come to be called "a working paper." They are the raw material of the contracts which the European nations receiving financial aid under the Marshall Plan will sign with the United States. Our good fortune is that they never got into hostile hands. For they were the work of Congress-harassed draftsmen in the State Department or the ECA who in their zeal to protect American interests made the Europeans look like satellites a la Russe. Armed with the document the propaganda mills in Moscow would have been worked overtime in trying to prove its case against the Marshall Plan. At our bidding X country would "stand ready" to do this, Y country must do that, and so on; a veto power was sprinkled through the document; and reciprocity was forgotten on items which could have borne such a provision without damage to American interests. With good will and common sense there would seem to be no difficulty in toning down the ukaselike language.

It is a pity that the United States insisted on separate agreements with the beneficiary nations. The agreement is the same for them all. Why not, then, have had a multilateral instrument for the signature and joint responsibility of all beneficiaries. This would have put the accent on Europe, an accent that expresses the spirit of the Marshall Plan. When Secretary Marshall last June launched the initiative, he talked European, not British, French, Belgian, etc. He wanted European, not national, recovery. He knew that in the new age the Europeans must sink or swim together, and that aid to individual nations would involve America in another "Operation Rathole." But, as so often happens, forward-looking words are sometimes spoken when acts and habits remain traditional. This was clear as daylight as discussions evolved out of the European answer to the Marshall Plan. The formula took the shape of individual shopping lists to make individual nations solvent. Continentalism is left in speeches and preambles and talking committees, and figures are toted up in terms of national requirements.

The ECA is being administered for the present in the context of these national figures. In this respect the United States could not wait till a continental organization had been set up in Paris. The over-all body is, of course, in being, and it is called the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, located in Paris. But at the meeting held to welcome our roving Ambassador, Mr. Averell Harriman, more shopping lists for the first three months of operations were offered. To his great credit Mr. Harriman told the shoppers that the United States was waiting till they had formed themselves into a team. The particular item under discussion was steel. The United States, Mr. Harriman said, cannot be interested in supplying steel to this nation and that, to support uneconomic and economic industries alike. It wants to see a continental steel industry emerge out of the American initiative—something like (for there would be nothing pioneer in it) the industry that Europe had before the British in 1932 started a protective tariff. He said, in effect, "I want a total figure, and it is up to you to divide it, and to divide it in promoting a single industry."

This is the kind of language that America should speak. From the start the need has been an offshoot of the OEEC in the form of what we once called a Peace Production Board. This board should be empowered to allocate Marshall imports according to a prearranged system of priority. This is a problem for the Europeans, but a problem also for Mr. Hoffman's ECA. The ECA must exert its leadership boldly, not in the shadows, as it did in the preparatory stages last summer in Paris. It cannot be content with supplying industries which have been duplicated under the stress of fevered nationalism. That would simply equip the nations of Europe not to trade specialties with one another but to take in each other's wash. Mr. Hoffman's word for Europe is thus not production per se, but production with an eye on exchange or trade; in other words, administration must carry out the letter and the spirit of the June 5, 1947, speech at Harvard, or the whole operation will backfire. It is multilateralism and not bilateralism that will make the ERP a success, no matter how letter-perfect the bilateral agreements.

Sale Of Norris

In less than 20 minutes the model town of Norris, Tenn., was sold by the Government at public auction to a private bidder representing a Philadelphia syndicate. Thus ends an experiment in governmental community housing that has been the subject of controversy for years. This TVA-owned development, built originally for construction workers on Norris Dam and subsequently used to house workers at Oak Ridge, is, indeed, an ideal community. It is a delight to the eye, an outstanding example of what can be accomplished by careful planning to combine beauty with simplicity and to make adequate provision for community needs without permitting the often-disfiguring accompaniments of commercialism to mar the harmony of the whole.

It is cause for deep regret that the once-fortunate residents of this favored town who had organized a Citizens Development Corp. in the hope of being able to take over the property were unable to outbid the outsiders. It is a safe guess that the purchasers expect to make a handsome profit from the transaction, either from subsequent individual sales of houses or rental increases. Although they promise to run the community along model lines, it is too much to hope that the town will lose none of the distinguishing characteristics that set it apart from the average American community. Finally, one may well question the wisdom of disposing of so extensive development to a single buying syndicate in view of the great power over the lives of the residents that will result from mere possession.

Adjournment

The adjournment rush in Congress has made an unholy mess of such transcendent issues as the draft, housing and support for the United Nations. If Congress adheres to tonight's deadline, patently it will be forced to accept many features in pending legislation that on sober consideration it would wholeheartedly reject. Indeed, the Senate filibuster on the draft compromise raises a real question as to whether there will be any workable selective service law at all if today's debate is to conclude the session. To responsible leaders in Congress it must be glaringly obvious that if they stick to the adjournment schedule many items indispensable to the national welfare will be left in a parlous if not perilous state.

Although Congress within the last week has done a good deal to justify President Truman's charges against it, it is futile of him to belabor the members for the pressure under which they have been working. The rush to leave Washington always invites the sort of flightiness and obstruction that are now being witnessed, and this year's scramble is complicated by the imminence of the political conventions. Yet the result is to leave a record with which legislators ought to be ashamed to face the voters. Consequently, although many Congressmen undoubtedly are anxious to wind up their work, the knowledge of the woeful deficiencies they would leave unmet may make them more receptive toward a prolonged session.

The hour is one for statesmanship, not partisanship or petulance. Senator Taft and Speaker Martin, who have talked of the possibility of extending the session, must agree upon and impress the necessity upon their colleagues. Of the two plans suggested, the proposal to reconvene after the conventions is much to be preferred over an attempt to hold meetings between the political gatherings, for the same distractions that now prevail would be present during the interconvention period. Even the possibility that a member of Congress may be a presidential nominee or that the respective parties would be embarrassed by platform pledges cannot obscure the grave consequences of an abdication of responsibility. The time has long since passed, if it ever existed, when the National Legislature could leave town with its knitting half done without a corresponding deterioration in the quality of government. A decision to reconvene Congress after the conventions is the only course consistent with reality.

Amputee Autos

It would be revealing to know the reasoning behind Representative Kean's objection to House consideration of the bill to continue the gift of automobiles to disabled veterans. If Mr. Kean represented the views of the House leadership, then the Republican high command can be accused of a particularly stupid kind of economy inflicted at the expense of men maimed in the service of their country. The purpose of the Rogers bill to which Mr. Kean objected was to continue beyond the June 30 expiration date the provision granting $1600 to seriously disabled veterans for the purchase of automobiles. The Rogers bill would expand the present law to the extent of making eligible, in addition to leg amputees and paraplegics, men who lost their eyesight or use of an arm. It also would allow such veterans to receive cars even though they personally are not competent to drive.

The original authorization of automobiles for amputees was passed two years ago. It has been of inestimable help in raising the morale of disabled veterans and enabling them to get jobs and lead reasonably active lives. About 8000 veterans, however, many of them still in hospitals, have not yet availed themselves of this benefit. Thus it is essential to continue the law if the maximum rehabilitational purpose is to be served. The Rogers bill was reported out by the House Veterans Committee nearly a year ago, and the Senate passed a similar bill last July, the only important difference being that the Senate version would restrict benefits to World War II veterans while the Rogers bill would include those of World War I. The Rogers bill now appears lost, but the House still has time to bring the Senate measure to a vote by unanimous consent. The cost of such practical aid to veterans is trifling, and it is on such items that the concern of the Eightieth Congress for veterans' welfare will be judged.

Like Lightning

The busy, busy Rules Committee of the House—the committee that for weeks and weeks was too busy to report a rule on draft legislation, the World Health Organization, housing, the bill to finance United Nations headquarters and other vital measures—acted yesterday with the speed of electricity. A resolution introduced in the morning by Representative Harness to provide for another investigation of the FCC—shades of Congressman Cox and his witch hunt of yesteryear—was given a rule instanter and put before the House without a moment's reflection. What hath Leo Allen wrought! Obviously, judging from its progenitors and the time of its propagation, another star chamber, conceived in politics and dedicated to the proposition that a Federal agency can do no right. The Rules Committee of the Eightieth Congress could come to no more fitting finish.

Belasco Theater

The Federal Government paid $400,000 for the Belasco Theater and grounds. Under the proposal as drawn and advertised by the Public Buildings Administration the Government in effect most generously offers to lease the Belasco for at least a year. In return for this a theatrical producer willing to bring theater—legitimate theater—to the Nation's Capital for a democratic audience must invest approximately $400,000 to restore the theater to operating condition.

To put it mildly this is to make a farce of any prospect of theater in the near future. It appears that every possible obstacle to make the restoration and operation of this theater unreasonably hard and unrewarding has been incorporated into the proposals for bids.

Since the property will continue to be owned by the Federal Government the proposal should stipulate that the Belasco should and must be open to all. A clause should also have been written into it stipulating that the Belasco must be used only for theater productions, i. e. legitimate theater, opera, ballet, concerts, etc., but not as a movie house. This was not done.

Constitution Hall is furnished Federal steam for heat, though Negro artists are barred from performing there. The prospective Belasco tenant is faced with the heavy and needless cost of installing his own heating plant—a tremendous investment and totally unnecessary since the building could continue to be heated as at present, the tenant paying for this of course.

Bum's Rush

A few t urists Wednesday got a glimpse of what goes on in the Halls of Congress that was no part of their schedule on their guided tour. They had just come from the House galleries where Congress was in session and they saw, as they hurried past, a group of young men and women herded out of the corridor by 10 or 12 guards.

The "lobbyists" were a group of Federal employes who were trying to see Representative Joseph Martin to urge him to bring pay raise legislation to a vote in the House. Since Mr. Martin declined to leave the House floor to meet the delegation, about 30 of the group stood in the lobby between the House floor and his office to see him on his way out.

But apparently Mr. Martin was not prepared to face the employes from whom he is withholding increases so urgently needed. A group of guards suddenly materialized and acted like a riot squad breaking up a street fight. One officer (Badge No. 73) told me to move out of the corridor and when I asked why, said, "Because I'm an officer of the law and I tell you to, and if that isn't reason enough, I'll put my hands on you and see that you do." I wonder if the tourists heard that; I wonder what they thought about it.

Perhaps I am slightly naive in these matters. This was my first attempt to visit any Congressman. As a citizen and a voter, I had always believed it was my privilege to advise my Representatives of my interest in pending legislation. I had thought the doors were always open and that it was only apathy that kept the voters way. I see now that it is not a question merely of apathy. One must be prepared to be treated like a petty criminal if one wants to get so much as a glimpse of a Congressman, outside of a guided tour.

"Sales Tax"

Your editorial of June 12 on the District sales tax is about as reasonable a defense of this kind of taxation as can be made. Unfortunately, it is impossible to justify the basic violation of a just taxation policy which is involved in the proposed sales tax.

As far back as 1789, when the First Congress was meeting in New York, legislators stated a principle that is altogether applicable today. The House of Representatives was debating a proposed duty on the importation of salt. Thomas Tudor Tucker of South Carolina opposed the tax. He said:

"The true principle of taxation is, that every man contribute to the public burdens in proportion to the value of his property. But a poor man consumes as much salt as a rich man. In this point of view, it operates as a poll tax, the most odious of all taxes."

For the salt tax of 1789, read sales tax in 1948.

Gambling Money

The wife of one of Washington's big-shot gamblers is complaining because her allowance has been cut from $4000 to $2200 a month. I wonder if she ever thought about how the wives and families of the poor saps who lost on horses and numbers games the money she is spending exist.

Segregated Boys Clubs

All over our Nation, religious and social leaders of stature are promoting intercultural programs. In our public schools, a committee on intercultural education has been in progress during this school year. Yet, those adult citizens who control the destinies of our youth as directors of boys clubs refuse to let these youth learn to be tolerant by association and playing together with other boys.

The Police Boys Clubs do not admit boys of the neighborhood of different races, even though the police themselves live together and operate out from the same precinct. All of the colored boys in Washington must spend money and hours of time to travel to 12th and U sts. if they want to be members of a Police Boys Club. And what is most reprehensible is the fact that the managers of the Police Boys Clubs do not permit a colored citizen on their board of 60 directors, nor do they allow the teams of the colored club to go to their camp or compete in the police boys' schedule of games. They must play by themselves or look for outside teams, yet for years in the past, colored and white police engaged in athletic events together. Last week a track meet was held for white Police Club boys only.

The attitude of the directors of the boys clubs of Washington is equally reprehensible. Not a single boys' club of this national organization in Washington is open to colored boys. Attorney General Tom Clark and all social philosophers hope through boys clubs activities to reduce delinquency.

Origin Of "You All"

Abraham Lincoln went to Gettysburg on November 18, 1863, to dedicate the national cemetery there on the following day. On the evening of the 18th, he was serenaded by several bands and glee clubs; and in response to a call for a speech, he said: "I can't speak tonight. I will see you all tomorrow. Good night."

This use of the phrase that sets Miss Margery Krimont (letter appeared June 13) to gurgling with glee has a date a little more modern than Shakespeare's poems and plays and the authorized version of the Bible. As a matter of fact, it is 250 years later—and of Northern origin.

Two years ago a group of famous scholars—all of them Americans—published the latest translation of the New Testament. This was a revision of the revision that was made in 1901, which was a revision of the revision made in 1881. These scholars set out to translate the New Testament Greek into the most modern and up-to-date American English. This is how they translate the verses from St. Paul's Letter to the Philippians, which I quoted in The Washington Post of June 8:

"I thank my God in all my remembrance of you, always in every prayer of mine for you all making my prayer with joy, thankful for your partnership in the gospel from the first day until now. And I am sure that he who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ. It is right for me to feel thus about you all, because I hold you all in my heart as partakers with me of grace, both in my imprisonment and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel. For God is my witness, how I yearn for you all with the affection of Christ Jesus."

Some years ago the University of Chicago secured the services of Sir William Craigie, coeditor of the famed Oxford Dictionary, to bring out a dictionary of American English that would be comparable to the Oxford Dictionary. A group of American scholars worked with him, and in 1944 the University of Chicago published their truly great dictionary. This definition in that dictionary may set Miss Krimont to laughing uproariously at Sir William and his sponsor:

"You-all, pronoun. You. Used in addressing a number of persons, and also in addressing two persons or an individual. Colloq. Chiefly S."

In a footnote Sir William quotes this from Henry Mencken's American Language, fourth edition:

"It is commonly believed in the North that Southerners use you-all in the singular, but this is true, if it is ever true at all, of only the most ignorant of them. The word may be addressed to individuals, but only when they are thought of as representatives of a group. The literature of the subject is extensive and full of bitterness."

Miss Krimont makes much of the fact that St. Paul was a Roman citizen, and therefore, as she says, "certainly never uttered a 'you-all' in his life." As a Roman citizen, and as a very learned man, he must have spoken the Latin tongue and been steeped in Latin literature. So, he probably had re ' Cicero's famous orations and his beautiful letters to Atticus and to others of his friends. Both orations and letters are peppered with the phrase, vos omnes, which literally translated into English, is you-all.

A professor of New Testament Greek calls my attention to the fact that the phrase used by St. Paul in his letter to the Philippians cannot be translated into any English or American equivalent other than "you-all." And a noted Catholic scholar informs me that the Vulgate—the Catholic Bible—as translated by St. Jerome from Greek into Latin (and then turned into English) uses the Latin phrase which, in the Douai version, is translated "you-all."

This array of scholarship, which I hope Miss Krimont will not consider pedantic, may not be as "gorgeously funny" as she found my poor letter of the eighth; but it cannot be brushed aside with jests or caricatures on the Southern people. As they use the phrase, it signifies an abounding, all-inclusive hospitality.

Biggest Show On Earth

By Malvina Lindsay

President Choosing

"IT APPEARS," remarked the Cynic, "that the national party conventions this year will be just as rowdy, crude and juvenile as ever——"

"Say, am I lucky!" broke in the Plain Citizen. "I've got an almost sure chance on a gallery seat at Philadelphia next week!"

"As I started to say," resumed the Cynic, "American sophistication is still only skin deep when it comes to politics."

"What I can't understand," said the Foreign Visitor, "is this exaggerated convention excitement—this year of all times. Here is your country in the midst of world events and decisions that may mean peace or war, and your Congress suddenly quits—lays off for a month, even months. And the people apparently are taking a similar vacation from reality."

"What's more," went on the Plain Citizen, "I've got a place to sleep in Philadelphia. Friend of a cousin's wife."

"There you are," said the Professor. "The party convention's not only a device for nominating Presidents and Vice Presidents, it's a folk jamboree."

"IT'S THE biggest show we have," explained the Cynic. "We can't stage royal weddings or coronations or dictators' parades. And, believe it or not, the World Series doesn't appeal to everybody.

"The Republicans are really putting on some show this time," said the Plain Citizen. "I'm betting on Vandenberg—but not till after the eighth ballot."

"People don't have to read whodunits while a party convention is on," said the Cynic. "It's the national detective story. Everybody's waiting breathlessly to see who's the villain—I mean the nominee."

"I really can't see why the Nation should be so breathless about that," observed the Foreign Visitor. "What difference is there between the two party candidates, let alone those inside the party?"

"There isn't much difference between a couple of ball teams," said the Cynic. "But the crowd can blow off a lot of steam pretending there is."

"It's not the same thing at all," objected the Plain Citizen. "If I yell for my man from the convention gallery, or stand up for him at the drug store radio, it's because I think we need him to run the country. There's something about a party convention that makes you feel—well that it's your business whether you're there or not."

"THAT'S THE point," agreed the Professor. "In a party convention people are putting on the show themselves. It's about the only big amateur entertainment we have left."

"Don't forget the professionals backstage pulling the strings," remarked the Cynic.

"Of course," conceded the Professor. "But think of the thousand or more delegates marching around the hall with their State standards and favorite-son posters, singing and yelling and letting themselves go emotionally. Think of the gallery crowds waving their handkerchiefs and howling their heads off. Think of the torrents of eloquence from keynoters, nominators and seconders. Americans seldom get much chance any more to go in for old-fashioned booming oratory except at conventions. Think of all the doorkeepers, fillers of water pitchers, aides, pages, cheer leaders, platform sitters, corsage wearers, cocktailers, box sitters, getting a chance at national self-importance."

"And think," added the Cynic, "of all the people who can boast to their friends that they're going to the convention or have been!"

"Also," went on the Professor, "think of all the people at home grabbing newspapers to get the latest candidate score, listening at their radios, watching their television screens. Never have conventions had such advance billing. Never have they had such a prospect of news and picture coverage, of such a huge unseen audience."

"I PREDICT," said the Cynic, "people will be aroused to such a frenzy they will forget for the nonce their grocery bills and eviction notices."

"I can see," said the Foreign Visitor," that such a political fiesta would be a fine emotional outlet and probably great fun. But can your Nation afford to lose the time and energy put into such a spectacle at this time? Is not too much importance given to it merely because it is a good show? What will the rest of the world think?"

"I'm inclined to think," said the Professor, "it might be a good spectacle for the world to look in on at this time because it's a great dramatic presentation of free assembly, free speech and, to an extent, free political action."

"Also of the freedom of people to make fools of themselves," put in the Cynic.

"It's democracy both at its best and its worst," continued the Professor, "but at the height of its vitality."

"That's what I meant," said the Plain Citizen, "when I said it was a lot more than a ball game."

English Travail

After reading in your issue of June 16 the poem written by J. G. Davison of Surrey, England, I just felt I had to write my short comment on it. Having come from Plymouth, England, myself and having gone through all the trials of war and rationing all I can say is "no truer a poem was written." Yes, the people of America should thank God they live in the U. S. A.

Washington Calling

Republican Hopefuls

HOW MANY Republicans will go to Philadelphia with the secret hope that somehow the lightning of destiny may strike them is anyone's guess. That kind of hope springs eternal in the politician's breast.

Childs

Most conspicuous among these hopefuls is Gov. Earl Warren of California. He has the 53 delegates of California in his pocket to reinforce his hopes.

But Warren has an intangible asset that is almost equally important. As chief executive of perhaps the most dynamic and swiftly growing State in the Union, he understands the need to adapt government to change.

This is to say he knows a great deal about social security, health insurance, housing, and the demands made upon present-day government. While his speeches are sometimes fuzzy, he has shown that he knows how to manage California's mercurial interests and at the same time win votes in both parties.

In other words, he is aware that we are living in mid-twentieth century. For better or worse, and it seems to be mostly worse, this is the era not of the horse and buggy but of the supersonic plane and atomic energy.

UNFORTUNATELY, this awareness is not too widespread among the older members of the Republican National Committee. They show, and this includes some of the very dark horses in the Philadelphia stable, a wistful desire to live in the shadows of yesterday.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., is a warm, friendly Congressman from Massachusetts who, through political astuteness and the process of seniority, has risen to conspicuous office. Faithfully in season and out he has followed the narrowest kind of party regularity.

While he has never taken a public lead, neither has he ever done anything to check those in the House who tried to sabotage the program for Europe and who succeeded in blocking most social legislation. The fact is the obstructionists could not have operated without at least the tacit aid and consent of Speaker Martin.

He has some powerful backers, including the wealthy Pew family of the Sun Oil Co. In the event of a prolonged deadlock, a weary convention might settle on Martin.

IN THE same classification is Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio. A handsome, distinguished figure, looking every inch a President, he lacks Martin's natural friendliness.

His party regularity is as narrow as that of Martin. It is underscored by his belief in the inevitable rightness of great wealth and particularly self-made wealth.

In his two years in the Senate he has done almost nothing except to get shot at by a disgruntled officeseeker. In committee, and particularly on the Atomic Energy Committee, he has displayed an intense fear of communism.

As with Martin, Bricker has the backing of certain moguls who help to foot the party's bills. The Chicago Tribune wing probably would rather have him than his Ohio colleague, Senator Robert A. Taft.

Bricker will put Taft's name before the convention with a resounding home and fireside speech. In his loyalty he has publicly decried the rumors labeling him a dark horse.

The convention could reach down deeper in the barrel. But the public would be inclined to resent a more-obscure candidate conjured out of the smoke-filled room.

As Merriman Smith has put it in his interesting study of the Presidency, "a President is many men." It is, in fact, increasingly an impossible office, imposing an impossible burden on a single individual.

As we measure the men against the job we become ever more aware of the gap between the individual and the demands that inevitably will be made upon him.

Foreign Affairs Policy Looms Large in Republican Platform

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 18.—The tone of at least two planks in the Republican platform appeared set tonight as spread-eagled GOP resolutions subcommittees completed hearings and started reducing ideas to print.

Resolutions Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., told reporters to look for the "most international" foreign affairs plank in the history of the Republican Party.

And one of his subcommittee chairmen, Chief Justice George W. Maxey of the Pennsylvania State Supreme Court, resolved doubts about another. He predicted a civil rights plank with teeth in it despite protests from Dixie Republicans.

Surprise testimony from Harold E. Stassen, first avowed presidential candidate on the scene, meanwhile delayed scheduled midday closing of platform hearings.

Two of Lodge's subcommittees reconvened late today to hear the Minnesotan urge "specific" planks on housing, improved medical and hospital care and development of natural resources.

Two other Stassen planks: a pledge that the Norris-LaGuardia Act will not be repealed or weakened, and a GOP promise never to ban by law voluntary industry-wide bargaining.

Stassen first planned to appear before Lodge's own foreign affairs subcommittee but later told newsmen the group was familiar with his views. He said he was sure it would report a bipartisan foreign plank.

Lodge conferred with him briefly outside his hearing room and later called two domestic subcommittees back to take his testimony.

The resolutions group will spend the balance of the weekend trying to square Republican intentions with the incomplete record of Congress. Planks will be reduced to their final abbreviated form Monday, but won't go to the convention until Tuesday or Wednesday.

In predicting a strong international platform, Lodge said he had heard "no expressions of opinion from the Taber people." (He referred to Chairman Taber of the House Appropriations Committee.)

"Times have changed since 1920," the grandson of another Henry Cabot Lodge, who bitterly fought American entry into the original League of Nations, told newsmen.

Conditions Different

"Today we have a different set of conditions. We've got to adjust ourselves to them" . . .

"All of our leading presidential candidates are on record in favor of aid to Euhope and participation in international affairs. We could hardly do otherwise than offer a platform suitable to these men."

Stassen released a letter to Lodge saying he hoped the foreign policy planks will include a definite commitment for carrying out the European recovery program "if nations help themselves and move toward freedom."

Stassen also asked "leadership toward strengthening of the United Nations, the re-writing of the charter, and ending of the veto."

In another sector, the Republican resolutions committee leaned backward to soften protests of Southern Republicans against "inadequate" representation on the civil rights subcommittee. First, Orville Bullington of Texas, who complained first, was added. Then these other Southern and border State people received seats on that plank-drafting group: W. C. Meekins of North Carolina, Dr. Lee M. Owens of Mississippi and Miss Elizabeth Talbott of West Virginia.

In spite of the additions, Judge Maxey obviously had the votes to confirm the strong plank he forecast in the full committee if not in the sub unit.

White States Stand

Today the subcommittee heard Walter White, executive secretary of the National Associations for the Advancement of Colored People recall the 1944 GOP pledges of FEPC antilynching and antipoll taxation.

Said White: "The members of our organizations have been deeply disappointed by the complete failure of the Republican controlled Eightieth Congress to enact any of the civil rights legislation pledged in the 1944 platform."

[The Associated Press said the subcommittee was reported last night to have voted for a pledge to support laws or constitutional amendments against poll taxes, lynching, racial segregation in the armed services, and unfair employment practices.—Editor's Note.]

Another subcommittee heard President William Green of the American Federation of Labor demand that the platform include a provision calling for a $1 hourly minimum wage.

Green urged (1) repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act (2) curbs on inflation (3) active efforts for world peace (4) Federal aid to education and (5) improved social security coverage.

Committees Scattered

The subcommittees were so scattered, from Convention Hall to the Bellevue-Stratford headquarters, that some took testimony on unrelated subjects when a witness happened to walk in.

The unit on Economic and Small business, instead of Lodge's foreign relations group, thus heard Morris Sayre, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, advocate a "firm, nonpartisan and unmistakably clear foreign policy."

Sayre asked Republicans to "definitely" commit themselves to "develop a program of international relations which clearly recognizes the United States is defending the cause of peace and freedom for itself and will cooperate with all people throughout the world who are trying to attain the same objective."

In testifying before the same subcommittee late in the afternoon Stassen stuck to domestic issues. He not only called on GOP leaders to "break through the housing jam" but in effect indorsed the Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill, as opposed to House committee modifications.

"Granted," he said, "that governmental construction and public ownership of housing are not desirable as long-range objectives, but until such time as the supply of housing improves, a public low-rental program should be carried out."

Before the Subcommittee on Western Affairs he called for an annual Government investment of about one billion dollars for "multiple purpose, dams on the Missouri and Columbia Rivers" and other rivers and for accelerated hydro-electric, reclamation, irrigation, flood control and navigation projects.

Lutheran Group Seeks Church Unification

Fresno, Calif., June 18 (AP).—Eventual unification of all Lutheran Churches in America was sought today by the United Evangelical Lutheran Church.

In national convention here, the Church unanimously favored merger of the five member churches of the American Lutheran Conference.

The conference comprises approximately one third of the Nation's total Lutheran membership and is a cooperative agency in which members retain autonomy.

Republicans Study D. C. Vote Plans

By a Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 18.—A Republican resolutions subcommittee tonight weighed the merits of local versus Federal suffrage for the District after hearing spokesmen for both proposed GOP planks state their cases.

The Washington Home Rule Committee, represented today by Sturgis Warner, asked the subcommittee to recommend this plank:

"We favor restoring local self-government to residents of the Nation's Capital."

GOP District delegates to the convention sent Mrs. William F. Culbertson, George A. Parker and National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay before the platform unit to urge Federal suffrage.

Their proposed plank read:

"We favor granting to the District of Columbia voting representation in the Congress and in the electoral college."

Deane C. Davis of Vermont, chairman of the special subcommittee on Government affairs, asked a lot of questions about District's voteless status. Then his group went into executive session on recommendations to the GOP drafting committee.

Warner, today's first witness, presented arguments for home rule only briefly sketched yesterday by Mrs. Charles H. Hagerty of Washington.

Auchincloss Bill Indorsed

As opposed to Federal suffrage, requiring a Constitutional amendment, he urged "Something simpler . . . a limited form of municipal government with general supervision by Congress.

He specifically indorsed the Auchincloss bill now pending in the House after time ran out in two days of debate. He told the GOP group it is "By no means dead."

Warner argued that a large percentage of the voters of the country and nonvoters of the District are in favor of home rule and urged the Republican convention to follow the lead of House advocates.

He said opposition to the Auchincloss bill came chiefly from Southern Democrats and the GOP "owes it to itself and to the country to take the leadership" with a positive plank.

Mrs. Culbertson, wife of the former Ambassador to Chile, backed up by Colladay, later argued the case for a Federal Suffrage Constitutional amendment.

Home Rule Approved

Mrs. Culbertson made it clear that she was not opposed to home rule. She said she would consider it a "great step in advance" but argued the District could have both home rule and Federal suffrage.

Colladay, however, said he is opposed to the Auchincloss bill and as a lawyer had rendered an opinion that it's "unconstitutional." Noting that the Washington Board of Trade had gone on record agains home rule unless the District received national representation at the same time, he said he personally was opposed to the Auchincloss plank's "nonpartisan" nature.

"As a Republican," he said, "I don't want to dehorn myself."

Saying District Republicans contributed $95,000 to the GOP in the last campaign, he stressed that the Federal plank was the one recommended by "the Republican organization."

"We don't want a delegate in Congress," he said. "We are not a territory. We want two Congressmen and one or two Senators.

Business Views Cited

"Businessmen don't look favorably on home rule without national representation, because we have had a Government free of corruption and we don't want to trade, sight unseen."

Warner earlier told the committee that Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) had worked out a bill removing most of the early objections to home rule.

Warner pointed out that in any event the plan could not become effective until there is a plebiscite, "so Congress is not forcing it down their throats."

One of home rule's chief benefits, Warner argued, would be to Congressmen themselves, relieving them of "trivial" burdens, such as "where the proceeds of soda pop sold at the Armory shoul dgo."

The Gallup Poll

People Want Humanitarian Qualities in U. S. President

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 18.—If you were President of the United States what would you do?

That question was put to thousands of Johns and Marys, average men and women, in all parts of the country, and the answers which the people gave are intensely revealing as to what kind of leader we Americans want a President to be.

We want him, above all else, to be a humanitarian, a benevolent father, a helper and protector of the common man. The typical American says that if he were President he would devote his energies to "helping people and trying to make them happy."

This conception of the kind of man who should be President is expressed in many ways by the people questioned in the poll: "I would try to do something to make the people in the slums happier . . . So many children don't get enough to eat, I'd want to try to help . . . I'd fight for the poor people and see that they don't get fooled by the rich and greedy."

One reason for the success and popularity of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President was that the masses felt a benevolence and humanitarianism in his make-up. This feeling sustained him through years when he was criticized as an inefficient President and a poor administrator.

The public's desire for a "great White Father" in the White House has a bearing on the 1948 presidential campaign. Humanitarian appeals can be powerful vote getters. President Truman's campaigning on his recent trip to the West has emphasized humanitarian appeals against a Congress which, the President claims, legislated on behalf of the vested interests and the wealthy. Correspondents who toured with the President have reported that this line of approach seemed to have an effect on the crowds.

Besides wanting to help and protect the common man, here are the main things which the typical American would want to do if he were President:

Improve economic conditions, improve democracy, try to bring about world peace, promote religious teachings and improve the education of the people.

IF WE had a woman President what would things be like. Judging by today's poll, women would do much the same sort of things as men would if they were President. The women did, however, vote a little more strongly for trying to bring about peace, and showed more concern than men over lowering the cost of living.

However the survey found isolated examples where women have a definitely partisan viewpoint. One woman replied, "I would impose a heavy tax on all bachelors." Another said, "I would help all working girls." Another advocated separate public taverns for women.

One voter quietly replied: "I would not accept the Presidency. I am not qualified."

Truman Back, Pleased by Trip; Ready for Feud With Congress

By The Associated Press

President Truman came back to Washington yesterday—ready to resume at close quarters his cross-country feud with Congress.

The President said he was "very happy and pleased" with his 15-day 8000-mile rail journey to Los Angeles and back. "I think it was educational both for me and the country," he told reporters, smilingly.

A good-sized crowd, including most members of his Cabinet and a number of other officials, greeted Mr. Truman at Union Terminal. The President, who has lambasted Congress' Republican leaders all along his route, didn't respond this time to cries of "Speech!"

Instead, with dozens of waving spectators running along side, he rode off in an official limousine to the White House, where all 200 employes lined up to meet him on the south lawn. Mr. Truman shook hands all around before going inside to lunch.

Plenty of Work Awaits Him

Sprucely dressed in light tan and gray, the President looked cheerful and ready for work. There was plenty of that ahead of him—including a stack of 150 or more bills passed by the Congress he has called the worst, or at least the second worst, in history.

And there was a breakdown in soft coal negotiations. The report was waiting for Mr. Truman, who can intervene under "national emergency" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to head off a strike threat. Qualified sources said he probably would do so within 48 hours.

Three times this week Congress, sweating its way toward adjournment in time for the Republican National Convention next week, has passed bills into law over Mr. Truman's veto. The President promised more vetoes—"in due time," he explained today.

One may be slapped on the housing bill which Congress is trying to whip into final shape. As his cross-country trip, originally described as "nonpolitcal," neared an end, Mr. Truman said the housing legslation had been "emasculated" and now was only a "real estate lobby" bill.

Congress Attacked Again

He swung again at Congress in a talk at Altoona, Pa., saying GOP leaders were trying to "overturn the Civil Service system" by holding up a number of his postmaster appointments.

It was shafts such as these, mostly delivered from the rear platform of the special train, that led Senator Taft (R., Ohio) to complain that the President was "blackguarding Congress at every whistle-stop."

In his whirlwind series of addresses, the President touched on practically every public issue except his civil rights program, Palestine and the Henry Wallace-for-President movement.

Washington opinion differed on whether Mr. Truman gained or lost political ground by his trip. His friends said he had gained stature and aroused enthusiasm as a champion of the kind of Government most people want. His critics said he had spread disharmony and lost support by "destructive" criticism of Congress.

There was general agreement, however, that Mr. Truman at least had shown himself to be a fighter who is determined to be nominated and elected to the Presidency in his own right.

GOP Seeks To Harvest Female Vote

By Christine Sadler Coe

Philadelphia, June 18.—With a bold come-on glance at women voters—who will outnumber the men by 1,300,000 in November—the GOP has loaded its 1948 convention program with more woman bait than the oldest delegate has seen in a lifetime.

First of all, it is permitting four times more talking by women than ever before. Former Congresswoman Clare Booth Luce, who in 1944 became the first woman to make a major speech at a Republican convention, will give a repeat performance on Monday night. During the week she will be followed by three other keynoters: Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, Congresswoman Katharine St. George of New York — both speaking Tuesday — and Mrs. Robert W. McAuley, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, who will speak on Wednesday.

If Representative Margaret Chase Smith of Maine wins the senatorial nomination from her State in Monday's primary, it is agreed that a spotlight speaking place will be found for her later in the week.

113 Women Delegates

The total number of women delegates to the convention this time is 113, an increase of 12% over the 1944 total. In addition, there are 240 women alternates.

Minnesota has the largest number of women, with 10 delegates—out of a total of 25 from the State—and 10 alternates. Other States with large portions of women delegates are: California, Connecticut, Maine, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington.

For the first time in Republican history, a woman—Mary Donlon of New York—is serving as chairman of a resolutions subcommittee. As head of the labor and social welfare group, she will have an important say about what women get promised in the 1948 platform. Forty-four other women are serving as members of the resolutions committee and are apportioned to its nine subcommittees, on four of which they hold a majority. Mrs. Marion Shultz of Spokane, Wash., is vice chairman of the main committee.

Lehrbas Gets State Information Post

The State Department yesterday announced appointment of Lloyd A. Lehrbas, veteran newsman, as director of its Office of International Information. The appointment had been publicly forecast.

Lehrbas, 49, a native of Montpelier, Idaho, will be in charge of the department's international press and publications, "Voice of America" broadcasts, and motion pictures.

Dewey Wins Ga. Delegates afternoon that the decision of the national committee would stand.

Today, like every other day this week in Philadelphia, saw a familiar technique in operation at the headquarters of the candidates.

Brown Puts In Claim

Brownell, at a news conference in the Bellevue-Stratford this morning, told reporters that Governor Dewey had picked up 25 additional delegates overnight. He reiterated that the New Yorker would lead all others on the first ballot next week.

Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio, campaign manager for Taft, saw Brownell and raised him. Talking to reporters in the North Garden Room on the eighteenth floor of the Bellevue-Stratford, Brown said that Taft had acquired a new increment of "30 to 40" delegates who would come to him after the first or second ballot. The figure, he said, might be as high as 60.

Ted Gamble, a Stassen spokesman, said that the Minnesotan's delegates were holding fast and were resentful over talk about raids by Dewey and Taft.

Referring to the claims of the Dewey and Taft managers, Gamble scoffed and remarked:

"It's part of the 'blitz'—the claim—everything technique."

The pro-Dewey delegation from Georgia which was put on the temporary roll this afternoon by the National Committee is headed by W. R. Tucker.

The pro-Taft delegation is headed by Roy G. Foster.

Georgia's secretary of State, Ben Fortson, a Democrat, had certified the Foster or pro-Taft people as the duly accredited delegates to the Philadelphia convention.

The Tucker or pro-Dewey delegates charged before the National Committee that their rivals had worked with the Democratic machine of the late Eugene Talmadge in Georgia.

The hearing before the National Committee was bitter in the extreme. It developed that one of the Negro delegates in the Tucker faction had supported the late Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936. A woman Negro delegate in the Foster group charged that Roosevelt was the "worst enemy the Negro ever had."

When the time came to make a decision, the National Committee closed the doors. It was learned, however, that the battle between the Dewey forces and the Taft forces, the latter reinforced by some Stassen men, was a "slambang" affair.

Brownell "Well Pleased"

Brownell, talking to reporters afterward, said he was "well pleased at the outcome.

He said that an important principle had been involved, and that was whether a Democratic secretary of State in Georgia, acting under a Democratic law, could certify delegates to a Republican National Convention.

"We don't believe that is a good law," he said. "If it were upheld, other Southern States might try to follow suit."

He said he was confident that the convention itself would uphold the principle laid down by the National Committee.

Congressional Actions Vital

dicted that his statement will have little to do with candidacies for President—his own included. But he is expected to make a strong statement on the responsibility of the Republican Party in dealing with important issues. Vandenberg is in a strong bargaining position.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., chairman of the GOP resolutions committee, is a strong sympathizer and supporter of Senator Vandenberg on his foreign policy. Both want a strong foreign policy plank. If the House cuts ERP funds there will be a hot time in the inner council Monday and Tuesday.

Senator Lodge, anxious for GOP victory, is frankly worried over the failure, to this moment, of Congress to pass a strong housing bill. He believes this is imperative.

Joseph W. Martin, jr., Speaker of the House, again is to be permanent chairman of the convention. If Congress adjourns on a sour note, his explanation next week will be most interesting.

Those who have seen the convention key note speech of Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois, say, as it stands now, that it is a completely negative utterance. It is not aggressively isolationist, but it rings no bells with any save the most reactionary of Republican leaders. Efforts will be made, undoubtedly, to change it before next week.

Churches Preparing for Slump In Attendance During Summer

The churches, like many other Washington institutions, are preparing for the annual summer slump in attendance.

So far this summer, ministers report, the warm weather and vacation season have not made noticeable inroads on church population.

Many of them feel, however, that this may be the worst summer since before the war because there will be fewer limitations on transportation.

August seems to be the month of least activity, and many ministers use it for their own much-needed vacations. As one church official put it, "If we don't get it then, we never will."

To some ministers, the possibility of a summer slump in attendance presents a challenge. The Rev. Robert W. Long of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, has already started a campaign to keep his parishioners coming in spite of the heat waves.

"Spiritual Anemia"

Early in June he sent postcards suggesting that three months without church attendance could cause a "spiritual anemia," just as three months without food would injure the body. Each week since he has sent members cards telling of highlights of the Sunday service.

So far the results have been good, Mr. Long said. Attendance in June has been better than in any other June since the congregation was organized 15 years ago.

The Washington Cathedral picks up many of the people other churches lose during the summer, a spokesman said. The greatest drop in attendance there is noticed at weekday services during the month of August.

Dr. Alfred W. Hurst of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell st. nw., stated that he looks on summer as an opportunity to draw new people into the church. He said Sunday School attendance was expected to drop after this Sunday when children begin to leave the city for summer camps.

No Summer Changes

Sydney Kellner, executive secretary of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, reports that no changes in schedule are made during the summer. Attendance is reasonably consistent, though slightly less than during other seasons of the year, he said.

At the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, the congregation overflows into an auditorium, lecture hall and extra rooms during the winter. The Rev. Robert T. Bridge, assistant pastor, said the congregation last week was as big as ever. During the summer months, he noted, midweek and Sunday evening services are discontinued.

For the children vacation Bible schools will be conducted by more than 30 Baptist churches in the area. Though several have already opened, the majority will begin on June 28, according to Dr. M. Chandler Stith, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention.

Miss Rubye Risher, secretary to Dr. John W. Rustin at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., reports that all activities continue through the summer there.

Possibly because it is cooler, she said, more people attend the 9 a. m. service during the summer than the winter. So far, she said, there has been no slump at all in attendance at either that or the later service.

Coal Contract Fight Goes to President

By The Associated Press

The contract battle between John L. Lewis and the soft coal operators landed at the White House yesterday.

President Truman is expected to put into motion the Taft-Hartley Act machinery for another strike-stopping injunction against Lewis and the soft coal miners.

The current agreement runs out June 30. The soft coal diggers will be on vacation under the present agreement from June 26 to July 6. A strike, therefore, could not begin technically before the later date.

Steps of Action

First move under the labor law is to appoint a board of inquiry. When this board reports, the President next authorizes the Attorney General to ask the court for an injunction to restrain the miners from walking off the job.

Efforts of the Conciliation Service to head off a strike got nowhere.

In two days of meetings with Lewis and the operators' negotiating committee, Conciliation Director Cyrus S. Ching tried to break the deadlock but failed.

Lewis insisted the operators must first agree to start spending the 40-million-dollar welfare and retirement fund set up in the present contract, signed in 1947. The money has not been touched because of disagreement over how much should go for pensions and which miners should be eligible for the old-age payments.

Plea of Van Horn

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who several times has issued injunctions against Lewis and twice has fined him and union for disobeying his back-to-work orders, will hear a plea of Operator Ezra Van Horn for still another injunction tomorrow.

This one also stems from the welfare and pension fight. Van Horn wants to stop Lewis and Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) from beginning any $100 monthly pensions to miners under the compromise that ended the recent pension strike. Bridges and Lewis voted for the settlement, Van Horn, the third trustee, objected.

The miners still are under injunction from that strike. They can't walk out again in that controversy without making themselves liable to another stiff contempt of court penalty.

Senator Bridges filed an affidavit with Goldsborough yesterday asking him to toss out Van Horn's petition for an injunction.

The Senator said the minutes of trustee meetings would show that Van Horn had blocked every effort to solve the differences.

Suit Entered

Van Horn earlier this week entered suit in the Federal District Court to keep Lewis and Bridges from carrying out a resolution adopted June 11 over Van Horn's opposition.

That would have "activated" the 1947 fund. Some of the money would be used to keep up payments to distressed miners as laid out by trustees for the 1946 welfare fund.

The 1946 fund, once 26 million dollars, will be exhausted by June 30, Lewis says.

At Albany Parley

2 Bishops Elected by Methodists

Albany, N. Y., June 18 (AP).—The Rev. John Wesley Lord of Westfield, N. J., and the Rev. Lloyd C. Wicke of Pittsburgh were elected bishops of the Methodist Church today by the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference.

The two bishops will replace Bishop James H. Straughn of Pittsburgh and Bishop Lewis O. Hartman of Boston, who are retiring.

Assignments of the new bishops probably will be announced Saturday.

Consecration ceremonies will be conducted Sunday.

Methodists to Dedicate New Building June 29

Ground-breaking ceremonies for a new building at the Asbury Methodist Home for the Aged, Gaithersburg, Md., will be held June 29 at 3 p. m., the Rev. Herman M. Wilson, superintendent, said yesterday.

The new structure, one of four to be built at an estimated cost of $750,000, will house 25 persons. Dr. Karl P. Meister, executive secretary of the hospital and homes board of the Methodist Church, will be the principal speaker. Also scheduled to attend is Bishop Charles W. Flint, presiding Methodist Bishop of the Washington area.

Lutheran Church To Hold Festival

A midsummer day festival sponsored by the Senior Luther League of Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw., is scheduled for 8 p. m. Wednesday.

The festival will feature Swedish songs and dances, and will be held on the grounds of the Roosevelt Hotel, behind the church.

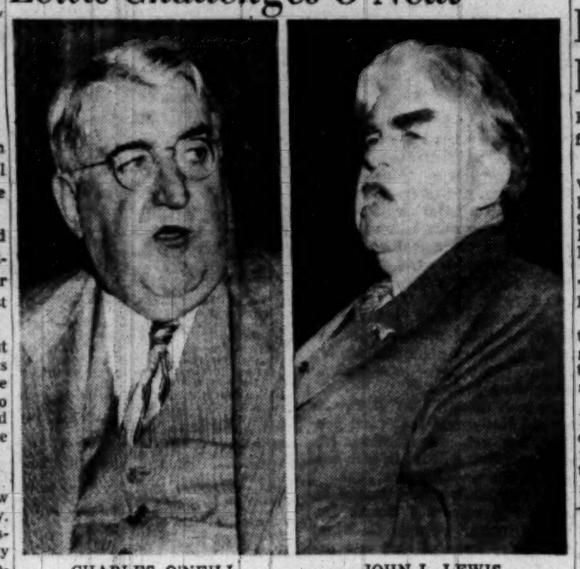
Lewis Challenges O'Neill



CHARLES O'NEILL at 270 pounds . . .

JOHN L. LEWIS . . . at 215 pounds

By the United Press

A heavyweight battle that probably could outdraw the Joe Louis-Joe Walcott bout almost came off at the soft coal conferences yesterday when John L. Lewis invited a burly mine owner to "come around and fight."

Three men who sat in on the union-management coal talks said Lewis wanted to trade punches with Charles O'Neill, a 270-pound former miner, now chief spokesman for management negotiators.

Lewis, 68 and weighing a mere 215, exploded in an argument with O'Neill over the union welfare fund, which the operators have tied up in court.

"Come around to this side of the table," he bellowed, "and I'll be glad to pay your hospital bills when I'm through with you."

"What with," O'Neill shouted back, "money from the welfare fund?"

measure to limit the terms of atomic energy commissioners.

Also the Senate will substitute a bill raising postal workers pay $450 and other classified Federal workers pay by $360 and send the measure to conference.

So far Taft said there has been no indication the House will be willing to accept the $360 raise for the other classified workers.

The GOP policy makers decided to try to bring up some nine measures on the calendar, Taft disclosed.

These include a measure to provide oceanic travel to Alaska, a strategic minerals subsidy, District sales tax and pay raise bills, a bill to provide for the development of civil transport aircraft adaptable for auxiliary military service, a measure providing for the administration of the Central Intelligence Agency the equal rights amendment, a bill dealing with the secrecy of United States codes and cryptographs.

Mrs. Nellie Hewitt Of Silver Spring To Marry Again

Mrs. Nellie Procter Hewitt, 51, a Silver Spring, Md., community leader renowned for her good cooking, yesterday took out a wedding license to marry again.

The widow of Frank L. Hewitt, real estate man, and the mother of nine children, six of whom served in World War II, Mrs. Hewitt said she would be married June 23 at 4 p. m. at her home, 9421 Colesville rd., Silver Spring.

The bridegroom will be Jules Fritz, 49, a landscape gardener of 4220 Nebraska ave. nw., who is divorced.

Last September Mrs. Hewitt was crowned "Mrs. Maryland" winning a $500 prize in a field of 200 contestants. The judges awarded her the title on the basis of being attractive, a good mother, and a community leader. She also has won numerous prizes for her fine cooking.

Housing Bill Passes 318-90

House thus had to take the modified bill or none.

Eighty-eight Democrats joined with 230 Republicans to give the bill the votes it needed. Against the bill were 85 Democrats, three Republicans and two American-Laborites.

Democratic Leaders Rayburn, of Texas, tried vainly to rally the Democrats more solidly.

"If I were to vote this bill under these conditions, I would feel guilty of perpetrating a fraud on the American people," Rayburn said.

But Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the banking committee defended the measure. He told the House that if it did not pass it, the chances were there would be no housing legislation at this session.

Referring to the T-E-W bill, Wolcott said "the socialists themselves say this is a socialistic program."

Called 'Dangerous'

Wolcott called the T-E-W measure a "dangerous proposal" and said that it would pave the way to Government operation of other business in times of production shortages.

Private enterprise, Wolcott said, built more than 914,000 dwelling units last year and will go over one million this year. In 1946, when the Government controlled housing construction, he said, only 413,000 units were produced.

Republican Leader Halleck, of Indiana, said the bill would do "much to help" solve the housing problem.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed a bill authorizing creation of a secondary market in the Veterans Administration for the purchase of home loans of up to $10,000 made to veterans. There has been no such market since one in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation went out of business a year ago.

PM to Change Name To N. Y. Star June 23

New York, June 18 (AP). — The name of the newspaper PM will be changed to the New York Star on June 23, it was announced today.

A PM spokesman said the paper will retain its tabloid size, but will make the front page a regular news page. It has contained mostly pictures, headlines and news summaries.

Senate Halts Sales Tax Bill

lation. In fact, he favors it, with the big proviso that the District should first be granted the revenue resources necessary to meet the extra budget load of municipal employe pay boosts.

Block Threatened

Unless the House-approved sales tax bill clears the Senate, Cain said that he would block every bill that would add a single penny of expense to the city budget. That budget, pressing the 100-million-dollar mark now calls for spending close to the last dollar of city revenue from present law, and for draining away during the next year all the remaining reserve funds saved during the war for postwar city construction.

The sales tax would produce about $6,500,000 in new revenue next year, and the pay raises for District employes at proposed levels would take most of the sales tax money.

With pay raises to meet, and no new revenue legislation, the District Commissioners would have to use their legal authority for ordering an increase in the property tax rate to cover the increased expenses. An increase of between 35 and 40 cents on the property tax rate of $2 per $100 would be needed to match the first year revenue from the sales tax.

Cain Plans Action

Cain served notice that he would move at the earliest opportunity to bring the sales tax bill up for Senate debate and a decision by majority vote. But with adjournment apparently hours away, such a move could be defeated simply by talk from opponents of the sales tax. Senator Johnston told reporters he was prepared to fight the sales tax to the end.

Meanwhile, Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) strongly indorsed an editorial in The Washington Post Thursday calling for giving District school teachers a bigger salary increase than the $200 now proposed. Senator Morse said that Congress should not adjourn without increasing the annual pay of Washington teachers, by at least $500.

"I do not know how the taxpayers' money could be better spent so far as a sound return to the Nation is concerned than by way of an increase in teachers' pay," Morse said.

Rent Increases Recommended For 618 Units

Rent increases ranging from 5 to 10 per cent were recommended for 618 units in six large northwest section apartment houses yesterday by Rent Control Administration examiners.

They included these apartment houses: 2901 18th st., 77 units, 9.11 per cent increase; 1445 Otis pl., 103 units, 9.51 per cent; 1445 Ogden st., 94 units, 9.2 per cent; 2000 F st., 126 units, 9.62 per cent; 1020 19th st., 147 units, 9.56 per cent; 1437 Rhode Island ave. nw., 71 units, 5.03 per cent.

Owners had sought increases ranging from 9.58 to 17.35 per cent.

Truman to Pick Board On Atomic Plant Labor

President Truman yesterday notified Congress he will name a commission to study the possible need of special legislation to avert labor shutdowns in atomic energy plants.

The President acted, he said in a message, as a result of the recent dispute which threatened to cripple operations of the Oak Ridge National Atomic Laboratory in Tennessee. Although that dispute has been settled, Mr. Truman went on, it has raised a question as to "the sufficiency of present collective bargaining methods in atomic energy installations."

nesting spot. The next word received was Dr. Allen's terse message, "We have found, etc."

The bristle-thighed variety, formally known as numenius tahitiensis, winter in the South Sea Islands, where they do their romancing. Toward the end of spring, they fly thousands of miles to the sub-Arctic tundra to lay their eggs. When the young are full grown, about August, back they wing to warmer climes, making a short whistling cry which, not surprisingly, sounds something like "curlew."

These particular curlews have lengthened shafts of flank feathers which project like bristles, naturally. Adults are between 16 and 18 inches long with variegated brown plumage, and feed mostly on mollusks and crustaceans. The first specimen was identified in Tahiti in 1785, but none was captured until 1869.

They also have interesting cousins, incidentally. The Encyclopedia Britannica, with what must be natural ornithological brevity and innuendo, states that the stone curlew—common to Europe, Africa and India—"has a peculiar form of courtship, and strange social dances in autumn."

One on the Aisle—

Joan Fontaine's Mood Is Romantic

By Richard L. Coe

"LETTER FROM AN UNKNOWN WOMAN," at the Warner, is up to its second bicuspids in teary romance. Since little moves the soul more than unrequited love, this might have been a distinguished film.

At times, indeed, and even in its over-all impression, this Stefan Zweig story starring Joan Fontaine is moving, but the strictures which surround the transition of a book to the screen are too much for it.

Take, for instance, the movie demands of length. A feature film has to be so long, otherwise, according to the way our exhibition set-up runs, it's not a feature-length picture. There's simply no middle ground between the short subject—18 to 22 minutes—and the feature film—at least an hour and 20 minutes.

In its original form, Zweig's was a short novel, delicately suggesting the moods and pangs of the lonely heart. What came up in the film as unbelievable sections of plot were evidently handled with subtle skill by the novelist. By having to lengthen the story to the accepted duration, the events of a delicate plot often are strained to incredibility and dullness.

Miss Fontaine's role is of a young girl—15 or so—who loves a handsome young musician—about 25—from a distance. She lives in the same Viennese apartment house in 1900; she treasures the sound of his music, rarely sees him, but builds up so consuming a passion for him that when her widowed mother remarries, she refuses to leave Vienna.

"LETTER FROM AN UNKNOWN WOMAN." Universal-International release produced by John Houseman for Rampart Productions. Screen play by Howard Koch from the novel by Stefan Zweig. Photographed by Frank Planer. Music by Daniele Amfitheatrof. Directed by Max Opuls. At the Warner.

Brief Ecstasy

Finally one night some years later, she catches his eye. He is enchanted with her for she appears to know so much about him and tells him little of herself. While she is but one of many women in his busy life, he does, for a few fleeting hours, recognize that perhaps hers is the spirit he has been searching.

The next day he must leave for a far-off concert tour; this takes him from the girl's life. But a son is born to her and somehow she cannot bring herself to reveal either herself or his son to the musician. As time passes (according to the film, not to Zweig's story), she marries well and her husband, knowing who her son's father is, accepts the situation gracefully. Her husband's only demand is that, when the musician returns to Vienna, she have nothing to do with him.

But the romantic yearning holds. She goes to the man—who never has achieved his initial promise as a musician—and discovers that though he thinks he knows her, their idyll meant little to him.

To wind up the story, Scenarist Howard Koch has devised death for their son, death for Joan and a duel between her husband and lover. Only just as he leaves for the duel is a letter brought to the lover, setting forth her lifelong passion for him—a "Letter from an Unknown Woman."

Leads Well Played

All this should have made a better and briefer film than it does. It would have been difficult, this pure evocation of mood, always with the box office in mind, but the playing indicates that it might have been done.

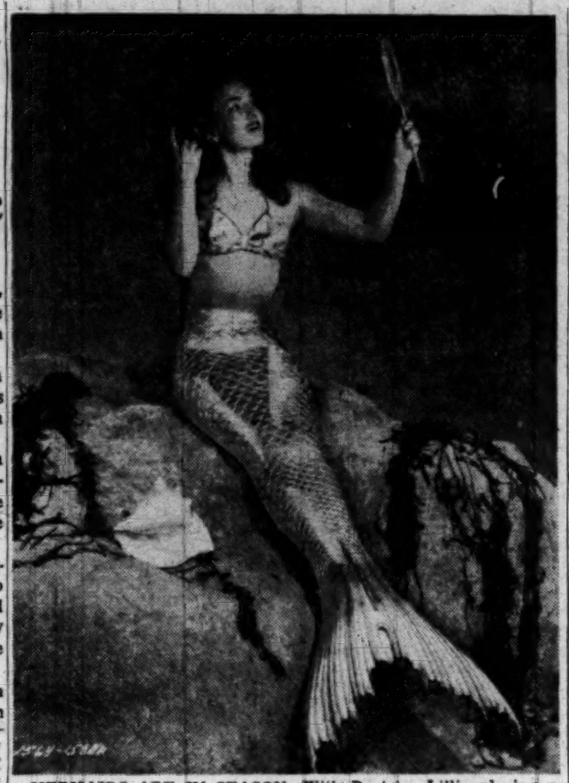
Miss Fontaine, once the 15-year-old stage is past, is lovely as the girl and Louis Jourdan's playing of the man is as understandable as his difficult assignment can permit. This French newcomer is dangerously handsome and you'll probably be seeing him around for years; his accent is less than Boyer's.

The supporting cast is top-notch with names; Mady Christians, Marcel Journet and Art Smith among them. And Daniele Amfitheatrof's music is finely fitted to the mood they're all striving for.

OLNEY'S "Amphitryon 38," we discover—through our comments on Haila Stoddard's preoccupation with her draperies—was saved by Miss Stoddard's skill with the needle and Ralph Clanton's wig-training in his Pasadena Playhouse days. . . . The costumes from that New York firm which is run by B's who are not brothers, just wouldn't do, Miss Stoddard and her cohorts decided. . . . So Haila whipped up some creations on the spot for herself and the others, while Ralph worked out some wigs that are far superior to the costume company's imports. . . . But they finished just in time for Tuesday night's opening, which accounted for Haila's evident anxiety about threads holding. . . . That prologue cloud set, by the way, comes from the Theater Guild's original production for the Lunts and it took a trick truck to lug it down here. . . . The comedy, in case you've forgotten our sermon, is literate, civilized fun; three more performances—tonight and Sunday matinee and evening.

THOSE Graziano-Zale fight pictures begin a round of the KB theaters Sunday at the Atlas, which will be showing them through Tuesday; Wednesday and Thursday they'll be at the Apex, next Friday and Saturday at the Senator and on the 26, 27 and 28 at the Naylor.

THE TRANS-LUX is holding the Zale fight films over on a bill that includes the March of Time's "Battle for Greece" . . . "Nicholas Nickleby" today begins its second week at the Hippodrome . . . This is the morning 1600 newsboys from the four local papers will see "Fighting Father Dunne" on the Keith screen at 9 o'clock . . . Tonight—around 8, it says here—Alexandria's Little Theater will be putting its production of "Ramshackle Inn" on television; you'll see it on WNBW, channel 4 . . . Russia's "Road to Life" will be shown tonight at 8:30 at the International Student House.



MERMAIDS ARE IN SEASON: With Beatrice Lillie playing a mermaid on the New York stage in "Inside U. S. A.," Ann Blyth keeps the trade alive in Hollywood. Here's Ann made up by Buddy Westmore in $20,000 worth of fish tail for the Nunnally Johnson comedy, "Mr. Peabody and the Mermaid," with William Powell as Mr. Peabody passes purchased by CTC passengers.

CTC Vice President E. C. Giddings said the company "hasn't decided" whether it will use "a couple of million" old tokens, now in storage, or have new ones made if PUC grants the boost. "If we use the old ones, we'll change their color," he added, "but we don't know yet what color they would be."

During the 12 months ending April 30, the company's operating income totaled $584,529—approximately $1,700,000 less than a fair return, CTC officials said.

$335,000 Deficit Foreseen

Without a fare increase, there will be a deficit of $335,000 in operating income for the year beginning July 1, the company declared.

A 10-cents-an-hour across-the-board employe pay boost, which will go into effect July 1 will cost the company an additional $1,100,000, CTC estimated. When this occurs, "the company will not be earning full interest on its bonded indebtedness let alone a fair return," company officials said.

This is the second time labor costs have been "drastically increased" since the last rate boost was granted, CTC said. Wage costs were increased approximately $2,300,000 as a result of a retroactive pay hike of 15 cents an hour and "fringe" demands equivalent to an additional 5 cents, granted by an arbitration board October 30, 1947, the company added.

Costs continue to mount, the company's petition pointed out. Track which could be reconstructed for $20 a foot before the war now costs more than $40 a foot. Buses bought at the prewar rate of $12,500 now cost $17,500 and "80 to 100" are needed for replacements each year.

Traffic Drops 11%

At the same time, the number of passengers carried during the first four months this year totalled only 72,901,000—an 11 per cent drop from the 81,926,000 in the same period of 1947, company officials revealed.

They attributed the decline to increased auto travel and a drop in Federal Government employment here.

CTC President E. D. Merrill said the company was "reluctant" to seek a fare raise and did so only after initiating economies that cut the "fat" from its services to fit them "more closely to the reduced number of passengers."

More efficient use of buses and streetcars, plus schedule adjustments, reduced the number of miles operated from 16,346,000 during the first four months of 1947 to 14,555,000 in the same period this year, company officials said.

Bits of Bodies Sorted in Crash Probe

Mount Carmel, Pa., June 18 (AP).—Officials sorted through a jigsaw puzzle of charred flesh and bones today in a grim struggle to identify the shattered bodies of 43 victims of a DC-6 airliner crash.

The remains were taken to nearby Centralia piecemeal as search crews uncovered parts of bodies strewn on the sides of a coal mound.

The morgue work led to the identification of only 16 persons in the 24 hours after the United Airlines "Mainliner" smashed to smithereens yesterday.

The body of Earl Carroll, Broadway and Hollywood theatrical producer, has not been located. His wallet containing $1024 in cash was found in the smoking wreckage.

An investigation was started by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Regional Director Joseph O. Fluet said "We're hopeful that our experts may be able to ascertain how this thing happened."

He cited a parallel in the DC-6 crackup at Bryce Canyon, Utah, last year. The destruction there was just about complete, he said, but experts were able to discover the cause. It was found that the probable cause of that crash was a fire from a cabin heater airscope which sucked in gasoline from the overflow vent of the wing tank.

Bodies identified were Richard Schember, 26, Elgin, Ill.; G. Harries, Boyertown, Pa.; Mrs. Joy Marcus and infant, Chicago; Nathan Berke, Brooklyn; Rowland Brown, New York; Hans Joachim, San Francisco; Beryl Wallace, star of Carroll's theater restaurant show in Hollywood; Lieut. Comdr. C. S. Avery, San Francisco; Mrs. L. O. Weiser and infant, Chicago; H. L. Slater, New York City; Miss Kay Thorpe, Chicago; G. W. Rogers, New York; William Casmer, New York, and Albert W. Stempel, Stratford, Conn.

Girl, Beaten by Father, Keeps All-Night Vigil by Slain Mother

Everett, Wash., June 18 (U.P.).—A 4-year-old girl, brutally beaten and thrown down an embankment by her father, was found today after she had kept a night-long vigil near the body of her slain mother.

The child was suffering from cuts, bruises an da broken shoulder. She led a searching party to where her mother's body lay in a tangled maze of blackberry vines beside a lonely road.

The father, Wayne Williams, 31, already had confessed. He told Sheriff Tom Warnock last night, before the child was found, that he had killed them both. He said he struck his daughter, Bernice, and his wife, Lucille, 27, with a "fist-size rock" on a lonely side road.

Williams said he did it because "Lucille wanted to go back to Oklahoma and I didn't."

Sheriff's deputies found the child at the bottom of a 50-foot cliff 200 yards from Puget Sound after a night-long search.

The girl, dry-eyed, quietly led searchers to the body of her mother nearby.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

HERE 'TIS JUNE 19, and Bob Feller hasn't pitched a winning ball game in exactly one month and that's the most flabbergasting development of the major league season. The person who might have predicted on May 19, that Feller would get knocked out of the box in his next six starts would have been straight-jacketed and hauled away to the violent ward as plum looney.

POVICH

But that's what has been happening. Not only that, but Feller hasn't been losing any tough ones. He's been getting belted good. On two occasions he had four-run leads in the first inning and couldn't hold 'em. In the American League they've been teeing off against Feller as if he were Boom Boom 'Beck, the original fat pitch specialist. Figuratively speaking, Feller hasn't been getting anybody out besides himself.

Boom Boom Beck, incidentally, may be worth an additional note. He was a storied character among pitchers. When he was pitching for Brooklyn one day, against the Pirates or somebody, his Right Fielder Hack Wilson was so dog-tired chasing extra base hits off the fences, his head was hanging. When he heard another ball hit the fence behind him, he scrambled over for a quick retrieve and rifled the ball into the plate with a last fancy bit of fielding. What he didn't know was that nobody had hit the ball. Beck in his disgust at getting nobody out had simply wheeled from the pitcher's mound and thrown the ball against the right field wall.

MUDDY RUEL, HIRED at a fancy figure by Bill Veeck to become pitching coach of the Indians, confesses that he doesn't know what is wrong with Feller. One thing is certain, however, the batters aren't belting the fabled Feller fast ball. Nobody does that with any consistency. It's apparent that the Feller fast ball isn't as fast as it was in previous seasons. Buck Newsom could tell him how a pitcher loses his fast ball.

Newsom, always ready with a quote, was asked one day how come he wasn't throwing the ball as hard as he used to. He had the answer for that one.

"I'm throwing just as hard, but the ball isn't going as fast," grinned Newsom in a wonderful confession.

Feller is throwing hard, too. Even when he is getting licked, he throws hard, and even when he's winning, it's labor with him. No pitcher works quite as hard or fumes as much or grunts as loud as Robert. He doesn't know how to stop trying.

FELLER WAS A SENSATION even when he didn't have a curve ball. And then he blossomed as one of the better curve-ball pitchers in the American League. He had the perfect recipe for keeping the batters guessing with both his curve and his hard one. Good hitters feared his curve even more than the best fast ball in the league. His hard one was more effective because of his curve.

The fashionable comment to make is that Feller is too wrapped up in his other enterprises to concentrate on pitching winning baseball. That could be one of his troubles, but if so, it's a recent one. Rapid Robert has had his side-lines going for years—his barn-storming, his book writing, his personal appearances and his endorsing campaigns, and they never affected his pitching in other seasons.

His wife took the rap for him the other day when she declared that his concern over her health was affecting his pitching. That sounds more reasonable than blaming Feller's extra-curricular activities. In other seasons he has flitted from autographing parties direct to the pitching mound and even pitched no-hitters.

CERTAINLY THEY CAN'T blame Feller's recent lack of success on his physical condition. No man in baseball is more diligent about keeping in condition than Rapid Robert. He's a nut on the subject, even to the point of carrying with him a 10-pound iron ball to strengthen his pitching fist and make the 5¼-ounce baseball seem feather-light when he discards the iron sphere.

Speaking of iron, or irony, Cleveland folks can count it a crying shame that in the season when the Indians could win the pennant, Feller has been no asset. This is the year when Feller, with normal success, would be showing a record of 10 wins and 2 defeats instead of 5 and 7. That five-game difference would find the Indians breezing to the pennant.

But the Yankees, the Red Sox and other clubs with pennant notions aren't deluding themselves to the point of counting Feller out as yet, for 1947. They have before them the shining example of Hal Newhouser who lost six in a row early this season and is now on a seven-game winning streak. A month ago, he was supposed to be washed up.

A.s Walk To 5-4 Win Over Tribe

Cleveland, Saturday, June 19 (AP).—Hurler Bob Lemon walked Sam Chapman and Rudy York with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 5-to-4 triumph over the league-leading Cleveland Indians in a rain-delayed game that ended early this morning.

The loss was the faltering Redskins' fifth straight and cut their lead over the second-place Athletics to a single game.

The Athletics collected only three hits off the quintet of Cleveland pitchers but combined them effectively with bases on balls.

Chapman got the A's off to a running start in the opening inning when he slammed his fifth homer after Joost had walked.

Mulloy Quits British Tennis

London, June 18 (AP).—Gardnar Mulloy of Miami and John Bromwich of Australia both withdrew from the London Lawn Tennis championships today because of foot injuries.

Mulloy defaulted after losing the first set, 6—0, to Eric Sturgess of South Africa, in the men's semi-final round. He limped painfully throughout and was trailing, four sets to one, in the second when he stopped play. He said an infected toe was to blame.

Falkenburg and Sturgess play for the men's title tomorrow.

The women's final is an all-America affair. Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., defeated Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., in one of the semifinals. The scores were 6—4, 8—10, 6—1.

She will play Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont of Wilmington, Del., for the women's title. The latter downed Mrs. Canning Todd of

Tigers-Red Sox Halted by Rain

Locke Fires Second 65 for Record 130

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Bobby Locke and his magic putter carved another 6-under-par 65 over Midlothian's tricky greens today to give the South African a record-breaking 36-hole score of 130 halfway in the Chicago Victory Open tourney.

Midlothian's 6587-yard landscape carries a 35, 36—71 par.

Locke's sizzling shooting registered a new Midwestern PGA record for 36 competitive holes as well as a new low for that distance in the Victory Open.

Ben Hogan, who failed to defend his crown, held the previous Victory 36-hole mark of 131.

Record Is 126

The National PGA record for 36 holes is 126, shared by Johnny Palmer and Skip Alexander in last winter's Tucson Open.

For the second consecutive day, the 30-year-old Locke required only 25 putts, 10 on the last nine.

Nine strokes behind in the $15,000 tournament, which pays a $2000 first prize, was Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., who aded a 69 today for 139.

Locke—known as "Old Muffin Face" to his buddies because of his heavy jowls—posted two birdies on the front nine. He needed a mere 3-foot putt on the 391-yard fourth for a 3 and dropped a 12-footer on the 533-yard seventh for a 4 to round the first nine in 33.

Thirty-two Coming In

He grabbed a birdie 3 on the 436-yard tenth with a 6-footer. He stroked in from 3 feet for a 3 on the 327-yard fourteenth, took a 4 on the 516-yard sixteenth with a 6-footer and curled in a 12-foot putt for another birdie 3 on the 300-yard eighteenth. This gave him 32 coming in.

Following Heafner's 139 at 141 were Errie Ball of Chicago with a second-round 69 and Skip Alexander, Lexington, N. C., with 69.

Bracketed at even par 142 were Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., with a second trip 73; Jackson Bradley, Chicago, with 71; Jim Ferrier of Chicago with 75; Dick Metz, Arkansas City, Kans., who blew from a 67 to 75; Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., 67; and Johnny Bulla, Phoenix, Ariz., 71.

Billy Herman Named Pilot

Minneapolis, June 18 (AP).—Billy Herman, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, today was named to pilot the Minneapolis Millers in the American Association for the balance of this baseball season.

Carl Hubbell, manager of the New York Giants farm system, and W. D. (Rosy) Ryan, general manager of the club, said Frank Shellenback, the present manager had been ordered to take a complete rest from baseball.

Shellenback has been absent from the park because of illness several times Ryan reported.

Cliff Fannin Sets Yanks Down, 2 to 1

St. Louis, June 18 (AP).—Cliff Fannin shackled the New York Yankees with three hits tonight as he pitched the Browns to a 2-to-1 victory over the world champions. Tommy Henrich's sixth homer accounted for the only Yankee run.

Henrich's homer, which came in the sixth inning, was the only Yankee scoring threat. Fannin gave up but two bases on balls and struck out seven, getting Johnny Lindell and Yogi Beraa twice each.

Frank Shea also hurled creditably, but was a victim of bunched hits. Jerry Priddy doubled with two out in the first and came in on Whitey Platt's single.

By Morris Siegel,

Chicago, June 18.—In the 60-degree temperature of Comiskey Park, Walter Masterson couldn't warm up to his pitching problem tonight and the result was a 5-2 victory for the White Sox over the Nats.

In extending the Nat losing streak to six in a row, Masterson allowed only three hits, one of them a three-run homer by Tony Lupien. Masterson, however, walked eight and his inability to find home plate was responsible for his fifth reversal of the season.

Former Nat Joe Haynes, the winningest pitcher on the roster of the tailenders, was the benefactor of Masterson's wildness and Lupien's second homer of the year. Haynes craftily spread out seven Nat tallies to register victory No. 5.

Walks Precede Homer

Lupien's smash came in the fifth inning with the score tied at 2-2. Masterson had walked him on his two previous trips and had a 3-2 count on him when he grooved a fast ball which Lupien belted out of the park.

Scoring in front of the Chisox first baseman were Dave Philley and Don Kolloway, recipients of walks Nos. 6 and 7 off Masterson.

When Masterson gave Aaron Robinson, the eighth pass of the evening, Manager Joe Kuhel yanked him in favor of Forrest Thompson, who pitched hitless ball for the last three and two-thirds innings.

Yost Doubles Run Home

The Nats got their runs off Haynes in the fourth and fifth innings. Mickey Vernon singled Gil Coan home to give the Griffs a 1-0 lead in the fourth and Eddie Yost doubled Masterson across with the second run in the fifth.

After that, Mr. Haynes shut the door in the faces of his father-in-law's baseball team.

Haynes had only one serious threat to contend with after the fifth and Luke Appling took care of that situation for him. With runners on second and third and one away in the eighth, Appling speared a hot smash off Gillenwater's bat and doubled Vernon off second to pull Haynes out of the inning.

Gillenwater Throws Wild

After Vernon had singled the Nats in to a 1-0 command in the fourth. The Sox took over in the same inning, scoring a pair. Gillenwater's wild throw to third after Robinson had singled allowed Lupien, who had walked, to score the first run. Robinson took third on the play and he scored a moment later when Taft Wright hoisted to center.

Then followed the fifth when Lupien broke up the 2-2 tie and the ball game, planting his three-run homer deep into the right field stands.

NAT NOTES—Haynes was making his first start since a line drive off the bat of Eddie Yost hit him in the knee and sidelined him three weeks ago at Griffith Stadium . . . Masterson has walked 12 batters in the last 9 2/3 innings . . . To visit relatives here and also to console his managerial dad during the present dark days, Joe Kuhel, jr., arrived in Chicago today . . . former Nat Chico Pieretti will make his first start as a White Sox tomorrow . . . He draws Earl Wynn as an opponent.

Missed Plane Crash

Ike Williams Lucky He's A Fight Fan

Philadelphia, June 18 (AP). Fight Promoter Herman Taylor said today World Lightweight Champion Ike Williams missed being aboard the plane that crashed at Mount Carmel, Pa., because he wanted to see a boxing match.

Taylor said Williams boarded the fatal DC-6 at Los Angeles yesterday but got off at Chicago to witness the Sugar Ray Robinson-Bernie Docusen welterweight title bout.

He didn't learn the fight was postponed until after the plane had left. He boarded another craft and arrived safely at New York, then entrained for his Trenton, N. J., home.

Who's on First?

Lubbock, Tex., June 18 (AP).—Katcher now pitching for Lubbock.

It has the fans all confused. To make it worse, Frank Katcher, the pitcher, hurls with either hand.

Vernon Leads Star Poll

Chicago, June 18.—Mickey Vernon of Washington, 1946 American League batting champion, led the race for the American League starting first baseman in the major league all-star baseball poll today with 4528 votes. New York's George McQuinn was second with 4102 ballots.

Lou Boudreau, Cleveland's hard hitting manager-shortstop, today zoomed to the top as individual vote-getter.

Why Not Draft Him?

Charleston, W. Va., June 18 (AP).—A 13-year-old West Virginian is too young to need a fishing license, but he thinks the State should demand it.

Conservation Officer E. L. Anderson told today of approaching the lad fishing in the Ohio River and asking if he had a license. The boy explained he was two years shy of the required age, but added:

"Mr. Fish Warden, I play poker and shoot crap. I am old enough to do those things, and I think I should have a fishing license."

Lenczyk Wins College Crown

Columbus, Ohio, June 18 (U.P.).—Miss Grace Lenczyk, Stetson University ace, today captured the fourth National Collegiate Women's Golf Tournament by besting Marilyn Smith, 19-year-old University of Kansas entry, 2 up, on the eighteenth hole.

Miss Lenczyk, 20-year-old member of the Curtiss Cup team from Newington, Conn., shot a 70 despite off-and-on rain and a soggy Ohio State University course. Her total score for the tournament was 27 under women's par.

Erato 2d To $9 Shot In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 18. Under a daring ride by Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Newell Ward, jr's., Slam Bid went on to a two-length victory today in the featured Kenneth N. Gilpin Purse.

Arduini pushed the four year old between horses in close quarters entering the stretch and then sent him on to lead S. M. Follin's Erato and E. C. Gott Jr.'s Her Higgness to the wire.

Over a track that was much improved over the racing surface that caused an abrupt ending to yesterday's program, Slam Bid was clocked in 1:21 2-5 for the six furlongs plus 120 feet. Erato, winner of three races in a row here, was installed the favorite and Slam Bid returned a $9 mutuel.

Her Highness set the early pace, with Erato and Miss Anaconda closest and Slam Bid being rated well back in the field. At the far turn, Erato went upon the outside of Her Highness to get her head in front while Miss Anaconda came to the outside.

Arduini then moved Slam Bid up with a rush along the inside rail. It looked as if he would be blocked but a narrow opening developed between Her Highness and Erato. Arduini sent his mount into it and the filly came through OK.

In the final drive, Slam Bid wore down Erato and was opening daylight at the wire. Her Highness was tired from her early efforts and had to be driven to stave off Connie Morse's final bid for the show money.

Kratz Scores

The day's secondary feature, the William Johnson Purse, brought favorite players a victory. Freddie Kratz, the leading rider at the meeting, rode Easter Bonnie to a photo victory over J. Mauro's Golden Brown, with W. M. Hargest's Mr. Elmer third in the field of seven going about seven furlongs.

Golden Brown, a longshot, would have won except for having a loose bandage waving in the breeze most of the way. After losing this hindrance, the mare flew through the stretch and barely failed to get up.

Easter Bonnie, making it three straight wins here, returned a $4.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:33 1/5.

Mrs. Bower Wins District Championship, Brilliant 35 Equals Men's Par on First Nine

Indian Spring Star Beats Mrs. Meckley 5 and 4 for 2d Title

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Playing one of the greatest competitive rounds in local women's golf history, Mrs. A. B. "B" Bower of Indian Spring defeated Mrs. Betty Meckley of Kenwood, 5 and 4 to win the District Championship at Woodmont.

In winning her second District title in three years, the tall Indian Spring star shot a 35 to equal men's par on the outgoing nine and take an almost unbeatable five-up lead at the turn.

Mrs. Bower's beautiful round, probably the finest ever scored in major competition here, was three strokes under women's regulation figures over the rolling Woodmont course.

Mrs. Meckley shot a fine 40, only two strokes over women's par on that first nine, but against a round like Mrs. Bower's, her effort was wasted.

With her huge lead at the turn, Mrs. Bower added to her margin by winning the tenth with a birdie four and the players halved the eleventh and twelfth.

Mrs. Meckley won her only hole of the day on the thirteenth with a birdie four, but when they halved the fourteenth with threes, the match was over.

In winning her third Class A title of the season—she had previously captured The Washington Post and NBC trophies—Mrs. Bower never once went over par figures.

She birdied the fourth with a 10-foot putt following a beautiful pitch shot; the eighth with a good second shot and two putts; the ninth with a 20-foot putt and the tenth with a great iron shot which left her 2 feet from the pin.

And around her four birdies she sandwiched 10 pars. During her round she had seven one-putt greens—a truly remarkable exhibition.

Mrs. Meckley herself had five one-putt greens and only three bogies. She parred 11 holes and had one bird. Golf like that would have won a majority of local tournaments, but against Mrs. Bower it just wasn't good enough.

A three-time District champion herself, the Kenwood star said after the match that she had never run into a brand of golf such as was played by her opponent yesterday.

In the first-flight consolation, Mrs. J. P. Trouchand of Kenwood made use of three birdies in defeating Mrs. D. H. Henderson of Congressional, 6 and 4.

Mrs. John Ives of Columbia took the second-flight title by downing Mrs. O. L. Aitman of Army-Navy, 2 and 1, while Miss Ruth Simon of Woodmont edged Mrs. E. V. Brumfiel of Congressional, 1 up.

Third-flight honors went to Mrs. Sam Brown of Woodmont, who downed Mrs. G. W. Calvert of Washington, 1 up in 19 holes. Mrs. E. S. Hanson of Congressional won 7 and 6 over Mrs. W. E. Welch of Manor in the third-flight consolation.

Mrs. E. B. Lockett of Manor was fourth-flight winner over Mrs. H. C. Fisher of Columbia, 4 and 3, and Mrs. R. C. Sutliffe of Army-Navy won the consolation prize over Manor's Mrs. Ted Burrows, 3 and 2.

Bogart Wins In Maryland State Golf

Baltimore, June 18 (AP).—Tournament Medalist Babe Rafferty bowed out of the Maryland State Amateur Golf championship in the second round today, losing to Walter Greiner on the twentieth hole. Both are from Forest Park.

Rafferty encountered strong opposition all day. Eddie Meyer, of the Country Club of Maryland, extended him to 20 holes in the first round match, and it was Greiner's birdie on the 568-yard twentieth that eliminated the Babe.

Meanwhile, two favorites—Spencer Overton of Rolling Road and Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase—advanced to the quarter-finals with impressive victories.

Ray Heins of Mount Pleasant extended Overton, the Maryland Open champion, to the twentieth hole during the morning round.

In the afternoon Overton was two under par in beating Rip Mann of the Country Club of Maryland, 4 and 2. For the entire day's play, Overton was one under par.

Bogart had an easy time in the morning, beating Ray Swearingen of the Columbia Country Club, 5 and 4. He ran into more competition in the afternoon, but his par golf was good enough to dispose of Volney Burnett, 3 and 2.

Leemans Wins in Touchdown Golf

Webb's 72 Takes Low Gross Prize

Tuffy Leemans, more noted for his gridiron feats than his play on the links, shot an 84—19—65 to win the low net award at yesterday's Touchdown Club outing at the Manor Club.

Low gross honors went to Tommy Webb, whose 35, 37—72 won him first over Eddie Ault, who had a 36, 36—72 but lost out to Webb in the draw.

Second low net behind Leemans was won by Larry Thompson with 68—20—68, while third went to H. E. Davies, 86—17—69.

Frank Shiappa had the dubious distinction of winning the high score prize with an amazing 198 for 18 holes.

And A. C. Blaisdell won a prize for being closest to the cup on number 11. Frank Grimm's 275-yard drive on the eighteenth hole was good for a prize and Frank Altrup's 47, 44—91 took the award for the best southpaw score.

R. W. Williams had the most fives and Pete Paulson took the most sevens on his round, while Bingo Flynn won the blind bogey prize. Second was M. J. Quigley and third was L. Shomo.

Joe Wilson Wins

Joe Wilson's 72 won the Class A low gross prize in the annual General Accounting Office Golf Tournament yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club.

In Class C, Stan Johnson won with a 91, while Buck Sterne and C. Phillip were second with 91s.

One of the day's features, however, was an ace by Bill Shotwell, who lived up to his name by putting a one-iron shot into the cup on the 210-yard 17th hole.

Mrs. Dole Triumphs

Mrs. F. R. Dole took Class A honors in the Ladies Handicap Medal Play tournament yesterday at Congressional.

Mrs. Dole shot a 95—14—81. Mrs. Dixon Lewis, 100—22—78, and Mrs. J. L. Geddes, 103—25—78, tied for the Class B prizes, while Mrs. C. J. Matthews won in Class C with 108—35—73. Mrs. J. Myers and Mrs. D. L. Moorman tied for low putts with 29 apiece.

Two Tie for First

Mrs. Gordon Simmonds, 50—9—41, and Mrs. E. X. Murphy, 52—11—41, tied for first place in yesterday's Even Hole tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club. Second was Mrs. H. Nelson with 54—12—42.

Ex-Gridder Will 'Referee'

Len Walsh Joins Cox, Young On Armory Governing Board

Washington Attorney Leonard P. Walsh, former football line coach at George Washington University, yesterday was appointed third member of the new District Armory Board.

The 44-year-old former president of the Touchdown Club was chosen by Chairmen Buck and Dirksen of the Senate and House District Committees, in accordance with the provisions of the new District Armory Board law.

Walsh theoretically will act as mediator between John Russell Young, president of the District Commissioners, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard, the two board members previously appointed. For a long time the Commissioners and General Cox have feuded over the use of the armory.

Walsh, who lives at 3914 Benton st. nw., will act as referee in all decisions affecting control of the activities in the building excepting those functions allotted the National Guard under the new law.

From 1925 to 1927 Walsh was first-string guard on the University of Minnesota football team. In 1925 he was nominated to the All-America team by Walter Eckersall of the Chicago Tribune. He served as line coach at G. W. from 1929 to 1935 and is now a director of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs.

Sanity Code Panel Named

Minneapolis, June 18 (AP).—The National Collegiate Athletic Association today named 33 men as a panel to investigate violations of its "sanity code" and authorized an initial expenditure of $5000 to finance the project.

Clarence P. Houston of Tufts, chairman of the association's constitutional compliance committee, said half a dozen charges of violation had been received since the code was written into the NCAA constitution last January.

All charges are kept secret until the investigations are completed and acted upon by the full membership of the association. The code stipulates that grants-in-aid to athletes must be based on need and cannot exceed tuition and incidental fees.

Investigations of alleged violations will be made by three-man groups chosen from the 33-member panel. A panel chairman is to be named in the near future by the NCAA executive committee.

Tigers Give Schoolboy $22,000 Signing Bonus

Cincinnati, June 18 (AP).—Bob Andres, 18-year-old Cincinnati pitcher, was given a $22,000 bonus today for signing with the Detroit Tigers, his parents announced.

Mrs. Schlosburg Wins

Mrs. R. T. Schlosburg won the Army-Navy Country Club's flag tournament yesterday by putting her ball in the cup on the eighteenth hole. Miss Ann York and Mrs. S. D. Sturgis tied for second place by finishing 3½ feet from the hole.

Patton Wins NCAA Dashes

Minneapolis, June 18 (AP).—Speedy Mel Patton virtually clinched the National Collegiate track and field championship for Southern California today and brightened American hopes for a sprint victory in the coming Olympics.

The Trojan whirlwind ran away from his rivals to score convincing triumphs in his heats at both 100 and 200 meters as the twenty-seventh annual NCAA spiked shoe carnival got under way with qualifying trials at the University of Minnesota Stadium.

Slowed by a leg injury since he reduced the world 100-yard dash record to 9.3 seconds a month ago, Patton sped over the rainsoaked cinders in 10.6 for the 100 meters and turned the 200 in 21.3.

With Patton scoring twice today the Trojans earned six places in five finals, an accomplishment matched only by Minnesota. Ohio State, Illinois, Stanford and Texas qualified four men each while California, Notre Dame, Indiana and New York University gained three places apiece.

Among the other bright spots on this murky day were a record breaking performance by Clyde (Smackover) Scott of Arkansas in the 110 meter high hurdles

Scott won his preliminary heat in the 110 meter high hurdles in 14 seconds flat. His time, achieved in the face of a two mile head wind, eclipsed the NCAA record of 14.1 set by Forrest (Spec) Towns of Georgia in 1936.

In the doubles semifinals, Bogley and Yates teamed to defeat Henry Blodget and Benjamin Teneyck from Choate School, 9—7, 6—3. They will meet Squires and Gilbert Rothrock of Hill in the finals. The Hills pair won in three sets from Fischl and Clyde Barker of Exeter, 7—5, 3—6, 7—5.

4-H Leaders to Take Look At Maryland Tobacco Industry

America's young farm leaders, delegates to the National 4-H camp here, will take a look at the southern Maryland tobacco industry Sunday.

Three hundred strong, they will visit Annapolis early Sunday, attend church services there, then travel by bus to Upper Marlboro.

Farm boys and girls, members of Anne Arundel County 4-H clubs, will explain the production side of the tobacco business.

And a dummy auction, complete with the famed auctioneer's chant, will be staged at the Planters' Warehouse. The auction is being arranged by the Marlboro Board of Trade.

Yesterday the 4-H delegates, representing clubs in 47 States and Puerto Rico, visited House and Senate Agriculture committees. Later they visited the Supreme Court, as guests of Justice Wiley Rutledge. Last night they were guests of the Chamber of Commerce at a "friendship party."

Coroner to Make Chemical Test In Woman's Death

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald performed an autopsy on the body of a woman found dead in bed early yesterday in her apartment at the Scott Hotel, 2131 O st. nw., but withheld a certificate of death.

Although he said there were no suspicious circumstances, Dr. MacDonald said he would wait until a chemical analysis of the blood and vital organs had been made before issuing the certificate.

The woman was identified as Miss Margaret Forsea, about 30. Her body was discovered by a neighbor, Miss Grace Vitile, who said it was her custom to awaken Miss Forsea every morning.

Miss Forsea had lived at the hotel since June 2. Police found a letter in her room from Baker, Oreg., and asked authorities there to make a check.

Schools Close Wednesday For 3 Months

The old refrain of "no more lessons, no more books" will come true for the District's 90,000 public school children Wednesday when school closes for a three-month summer vacation.

Classes will resume September 13. Although the vacation appears a long one, actually it is a week shorter than usual. The Board of Education moved up the opening date a week to permit students a year from now to start their vacations early.

Yesterday was the last day of school for the more than 18,000 Montgomery County students. The 22,000 school children in Prince Georges ended their school term Thursday. Fall terms begin September 13 in Montgomery and September 8 in Prince Georges.

Arlington's 12,000 students began their holiday yesterday and will not return until September 13. Their neighbors in Fairfax County have been out since June 9 but must return on September 7.

House Passes $450 Boost For Postal Employes

Now Race Against Time to Obtain Congress' Approval Of Pay Increases

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The House late yesterday passed by a unanimous voice vote and sent to the Senate the Rees bill to raise the salaries of 480,000 postal workers a flat $450 each.

It's now a race against time to get final Congressional approval on this bill and the companion measure that would raise by $360 each the salaries of 825,000 Federal and District classified employes. Congress is scheduled to adjourn late today.

Senate leaders have served notice that they will amend the House bill to include pay raises for the classified employes. Shortly after the House acted on the postal bill, Senator Taft, the GOP leader, said:

"We won't take up any bill until the draft is disposed of."

Senator Taylor (D., Idaho) was conducting a filibuster against sending the draft bill to a Senate-House conference.

However, there was some hope that the House GOP leaders may reverse themselves and allow the classified pay bill to come up for a vote. Chairman Ed Rees of the House Civil Service Committee, was standing by to swing into action if that happens.

But if the classified bill isn't acted on in the House and if the Senate approves it, Chairman Rees is likely to ask the House to accept the Senate amendments instead of calling for a time-consuming conference. If the plan goes through, both postal and classified employes would get a pay raise on July 1.

The postal bill provides a 25-cent an hour increase for postal workers who are paid an hourly wage. It also provides an increase of 25 per cent for fourth class postmasters. All other postal employes would get $450 each.

The measure was coupled with a provision to raise postal rates by 125 million dollars a year. Air mail would go up from 5 to 6 cents; special delivery from 13 to 15 cents, and third-class bulk mail rates would be upped.

In the debate on the postal bill, Representative John Lyle (D., Tex.) and other Democrats protested to the take-it-or-leave-it basis on which they said the GOP leaders offered them the pay bill instead of one covering all Federal workers on a more liberal basis.

The Democrats were answered by Rees who brought out that the President, the Budget Bureau and the Civil Service Commission were opposed to both pay bills.

Representative Love (R., W. Va.) said the pay raise for postal workers actually amounted to $550 since the average employe would save $100 in income taxes this year under the GOP tax cut act. He also said the Republicans had given Federal workers a more favorable retirement system.

A plea for a classified pay bill was made by Representative Tom Murray (D., Tenn.). Murray said it would be grossly unjust and outrageous to raise the pay of postal employes only. He was joined by Representative Miller (D., Calif.) who shouted to the House:

"The faithful Federal workers have asked for bread but the GOP policymakers have handed them a stone—a stone covered by the slime of partisan politics."

Representative Vursell (R., Ill.) said that more funds would have been available for pay raises if billions had not been appropriated for foreign relief.

Senate debate on the pay bills threatens to be complicated by several amendments which may be offered. One that has been drafted for Senator Williams (R., Del.) would require Federal agencies to fire tens of thousands of employes in order to absorb the bill's cost. The cost of the two bills is estimated at 530 million dollars a year—money enough to pay about 200,000 employes.

HE KNOWS—But we don't. Emil E. Liers of Winona, Minn., holds a couple of otters at the Zoo here, while one nibbles affectionately at Mrs. Marian Nicklin of Warrenton, Va. The otters are named Muckonock and Bemidji, but only Mr. Liers knows which is which. He is one of the few men in the world who can tell one otter from another. Of course, otters can, too

Otters are wonderful, says Emil Liers of Winona, Minn.

It was quite obvious that the three otters that Liers brought here with him from Minnesota thought he was wonderful, too.

At the Zoo yesterday Bemidji, Winona and Muckonock, all yearlings, splashed about in high spirits, dashed from the pool where they were quartered to stand on their posteriors like gophers, and nuzzled him affectionately betimes.

Liers, 57, who can tell one from another—a gift given to few men—is a nationally known otter specialist. He has the only otter farm in America, he says.

A trapper who caught his first mink when he was 7 years old, Liers found some otter in his trapping line about 20 years ago. "The mother died," he says, "but I made pets of the little ones."

It was the beginning of a long friendship. Today he has 15 on his farm, in the care of a niece who is a trained nurse, in addition to the three he has with him on his lecture tour of Eastern States.

At mention of selling them for their pelts a pained look crosses his weather-reddened face. He sells them to zoological institutions, but mostly he raises them to love: "They make wonderful pets."

Five Injured In Arlington Auto Collision

Five persons—four of them Purcellville, Va., students—were injured when two cars collided in a driving rain last night at about 8 o'clock on Lee hwy. near Edison st. in Arlington.

The injured Purcellville youths were Willard J. Wilson, 18; Charles Graham, 14; Elaine Young, 18, and Susanne Rawlings, 14.

The Young girl was in serious condition, the Wilson and Graham boys in undetermined condition at Arlington Hospital. Miss Rawlings was released after treatment.

Also taken to Arlington Hospital was John H. Moten of 2106 N. Culpeper st., Arlington, who was released after treatment.

Arlington County police said Benny Watson, of 5062 Lee hwy., Arlington, a passenger in Moten's car, was unhurt.

Police said the Purcellville youths were enroute to Washington for a moonlight boat ride and that Wilson was driving their car.

Moten's car, westbound, skidded on the slippery highway, police said, and hurled across the road into the side of the other automobile which was tumbled down an 8-foot embankment.

Moten's car skidded up into the parking area of the Old Dominion Electrical Supply Shop, 5082 Lee hwy.

Charges Filed in Death

Meanwhile, charges were filed yesterday in Prince Georges County against two drivers in the traffic death of Mrs. Betty Jane Martin, 19, bride of only a year.

Mrs. Martin was fatally injured when a truck driven by her husband, John D. Martin, 24, was in collision with a Greyhound bus at about 7:40 p. m. Thursday at the Bladensburg Peace Cross.

Mrs. Martin

County police charged the husband and the bus driver, W. C. Breidenbaugh, 30, of Bel Air, Md., both with reckless driving and manslaughter.

Breidenbaugh was released in bond of $100 on the first charge and $500 on the second charge. Bond for Martin was $100 and $2000. They were ordered to appear at a hearing in Hyattsville police court June 28.

Police said Martin, driving a pickup truck, approached the Peace Cross from Bladensburg and was cutting through the lane to Defense hwy. when the crash occurred. The bus was northbound on Bladensburg rd.

Dies in Hospital

Mrs. Martin died a short time after the accident in Leland Memorial Hospital at Riverdale. Her husband was treated at the hospital for minor cuts and bruises. Breidenbaugh and the bus passengers were uninjured.

The Martins, who lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Butler, at 7400 Hopkins ave., College Park, celebrated their first wedding anniversary last weekend.

Mrs. Martin was an only child, was valedictorian of the graduating class at Mount Rainier High School in 1946, and attended the University of Maryland before her marriage. Her husband is a carpenter.

Mrs. Martin's mother is a teacher at Beltsville Elementary School and her father works at the Government Printing Office.

New Building Approved for Senate Offices

A new $20,600,000 Senate Office Building was approved last night by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) announced the decision. He said the building project, written into the final deficiency money bill, will come up for Senate action today. He said the bill also contained these decisions:

1. A $600,000 fund was approved for launching a long-plan remodeling of the Senate chamber, with the start slated for this summer.

Day Care Centers

2. A $150,000 appropriation of District funds was approved to continue Washington's child day-care centers through June 30, 1949. A $2600 family income limit for those using the centers, in effect this year, was erased from the program for the coming year.

3. A $75,000 fund for arranging the inaugural ceremonies for the next President was voted.

4. Another $15,000 was approved for planning Washington's 150th anniversary celebration in 1950.

The listed items were all added to the House version of the money bill, and must go back to the House for review.

Building Projects Cleared

Two big Washington building projects, already approved by the House, cleared the Senate Appropriations group without change.

One is the Federal Courts Building, to be built at 3d and Constitution ave. nw. for the District Court and the Appeals Court here. For this, the bill carried one million dollars in cash and $14,875,000 in contract authority.

The second building is for the General Accounting Office, to be located at 5th and G sts. nw. The bill carries a $22,850,000 contract authorization for the GAO building and five million dollars in cash is available from earlier appropriations to begin the project.

For the new Senate Office Building the bill carries a contract authorization for the full estimated cost. Also included is $1,100,000 in cash to buy the site and $850,000 for incidental equipment. The building would be located facing First st. between B and C sts. ne.

Coroner's Jury Holds Youth In Auto Death

A coroner's jury yesterday decided after 20 minutes deliberation that 20-year-old Melvin M. Gusdorf, jr., of 4700 Connecticut ave. nw., should be held for action of the grand jury on a charge of negligent homicide in connection with a Washington traffic death.

Gusdorf was driver of a car which last January 17 struck down Mrs. Hattie Schneider, 64, of Toledo, Ohio, and her daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Kremer, 44, of 515 Franklin st. ne., at E. Executive and Pennsylvania aves. nw.

The two women had been crossing the street to board a streetcar. Mrs. Schneider, who was in Washington visiting her daughter, died two days after the accident with a fractured skull in Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. Kremer, whose right leg was broken, was a patient in Emergency Hospital until the latter part of April.

5 District Bills Passed By Senate

One Admits Patients To St. Elizabeths Directly; Teachers' Pay Is Equalized

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the White House five District bills, including the one to permit direct admissions of chronic mental patients to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

A sixth bill was almost in shape for going to the White House, but was held up by a technicality. The measure is designed to equalize salary treatment of school teachers with a master's degree in Washington's public school system compared with new teachers being hired with a master's degree.

The technicality was that the House passed its bill, sent it to the Senate, and then the Senate passed its own bill, leaving the House-approved measure in the District Committee. Plans were under way to ask the House to pass the Senate bill so the measure can reach the White House.

Other Bills Cleared

The other bills cleared by the Senate, all by unanimous consent, would:

1. Let the District fix monthly fees for amusement places to cover costs of necessary special police and fire protection.

2. Set up a new scale of fees ranging from $5 to $20 for barbers' examinations and licenses.

3. Call on the District Commissioners to study the comparative parking rates and services in Washington and other major cities and report their findings to Congress next year.

4. Authorize the District to issue a chiropractor's license without examination to Samuel O. Burdette, who formerly practiced here.

Legislation which would let the Government give Howard University two Negro residence halls here for use as dormitories was cleared by the Senate and sent to conference. The halls are the Lucy Diggs Slowe Hall, 1919 3rd st. nw., and George Washington Carver Hall, 211 Elm st. nw.

Annapolis Stamp Bill Passed

Also approved by the Senate was a bill to authorize issuing a special series of postage stamps to mark the 300th anniversary of Annapolis, Md., next year. The bill goes to the House. Senate action was deferred on the bill to revise the District optometry regulation law, a move which is likely to kill the measure for this Congress.

In another decision, the Senate approved without change the plan cleared by the House to let the Veterans' Administration go ahead with construction of a hospital on the Nevius tract in Arlington. The House had previously taken out the ban Congress wrote last year against the project. Authority to begin the hospital is contained in the supplemental Independent Offices Appropriation bill, passed by the Senate and sent to conference for review of other differences.

The final choice of Washington's "Ideal Father" will be made today as judges decide between the many semifinalists. Winning father will be announced in Sunday's issue of The Washington Post.

The Washington Post will treat the winner and his family to dinner on Father's Day, and will present him a handsome plaque. The Ideal Dad and his family will be interviewed on station WINX at 5:45 p. m. on Sunday, and will see the current show at Loew's Capitol in the evening.

Man Hit by Magnet

John L. Smith, 40, of 5917 Jay st. ne., was struck in the chest by a 9200-pound magnet suspended from a crane in the Smith Junk Yard, 3619 Benning rd. ne., at 5:15 p. m. yesterday. Smith, an employe at the junk yard, is in undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital.

The Show Must Go On . . .

Dewy—Three former queens stole the show at the Masonic Night of Thrills ceremony at Griffith Stadium last night when they refused to let rain spoil the event for the crowd. The three lovely former queens, clad in their best party gowns, pose under an umbrella just before the show started. Left to right they are 1943 Queen Dorothy Murphee, 1947 Queen Betty June Brewton and 1945 Queen Dorothy Lewis

Drenched—The three former queens defy the rain to continue the regal procession. In spite of soggy skirts, running makeup they go on with the show and receive a tremendous ovation from the crowd for their sportsmanship. (Miss Murphee is on the left in this picture)

Rain-swept but smiling bravely, Miss Doris Jean Wagner, 18, last night was crowned Queen of the Masonic Night of Thrills before 25,000 thousand spectators at Griffith Stadium.

Doris Wagner

The dripping crown was placed on Miss Wagner's head by Radio Newscaster Arch McDonald, himself soaked to the skin. The queen's court, lovely at the outset, wound up likewise bedraggled.

All other events were callled off save for the Marathon run.

The hardy runners took off as scheduled and scampered about northeast Washington in between raindrops.

Winner was Lou DiFazio, Upper Darby, unattached; second, Navy Lieut. George Cole, Navy Olympic Club, Annapolis; third, Johnny Leiss, chairman of Distance running for the District AAU. Time was 55 minutes, 31 9/10 seconds for the 10 mile jaunt.

The festivities, sponsored by the Masonic Order will resume tonight with a parade led by Brig. Gen. Harry R. Kurtz, USA, ret. A 14-act circus, a model air show, and a fireworks display will follow.

Window Mistaken For Door, Guest Falls 3 Floors

A Portland, Oreg., lumber man walked through the window of his fourth-floor room at the Mayflower Hotel last night and landed three floors below on a parapet on the De Sales st. side of the hotel, police reported.

The fall victim, Joseph J. Connelly, was taken to Emergency Hospital by Rescue Squad No. 1. He suffered a lacerated eye, back injuries and a possible brain concussion. His condition was undetermined.

Connelly, who was registered in Room 478-A at the Mayflower, told police he didn't know what had happened, that he must have walked through the open window by mistake.

Twelve graduates of the Capitol Page School had to forgo receiving their diplomas in formal commencement exercises last night to help convention-minded Congressmen work through their agenda.

C. Melvin Sharpe, vice president of the Board of Education, who was to have spoken at the commencement, went up to the Capitol early yesterday morning and presented the diplomas informally to the boys gathered in the office of Orson W. Trueworthy, principal.

Trueworthy, who had expected that Congress would be working late, a week ago held exercises for the boys, at which Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) spoke and the class valedictorian, Richard A. Heefs of Oshkosh, Wis., was heard.

Viers Mill Homes Held Overpriced After Probe

Veteran Project Costs Run $1000 To $1500 Too Much, House Unit Says

A House committee yesterday decided that the Viers Mill Village veterans project homes, being sold for $8700, are overpriced "at least $1000 . . . and perhaps as much as $1500."

A minority report, however, insisted the one-story, frame, four-room, full basement homes in near-by Montgomery County are not overpriced on the basis of today's "absurd and fantastic prices" for all kinds of housing.

The House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Department unanimously approved the majority subcommittee report filed by Representatives Melvin C. Snyder (R., W. Va.) and Ralph Harvey R., Ind.). The minority subcommittee report was written by Representative Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.).

Beyond District Line

Viers Mill Village veterans housing development is located on 329 acres of land along Viers Mill Village rd., between Wheaton and Rockville, a few miles outside Washington. The Haris Construction Co. of New York, developers, plans to put up 1400 units. More than 200 are up already.

Hearings began April 4 and dragged over six weeks following "vigorous complaints" by Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) and others charging substandard design and construction, and overpricing of the dwellings.

The committee felt that construction of the project had improved since the investigation was undertaken, and stated that in view of the urgent need for housing, it was withholding any recommendations which "might tend to delay or obstruct this project." The report added: "Even inferior housing is preferable to no housing."

Builders Give Figures

The builders, during the hearings, presented figures to prove they could not build the units for less than $8000 each. Officials of the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration, which had agreed to guarantee the home loans when the houses were completed according to specifications in the plans, backed up the $8700 sales price as fair and reasonable.

The committee sharply criticized the price-estimating methods of both agencies, and declared their inspection systems to be "inadequate" for the protection of the veterans. FHA makes three inspections; VA one.

"We feel certain also that the Veterans Administration has ample power to protect veterans after the formal conveyance of the property," the report said. "This protection should extend to requiring replacement or correction of inferior workmanship and faulty materials."

The committee called on Congress to make certain that veterans are not "victimized" under the protective seal of FHA and VA-approved government-guaranteed mortgages.

In his minority report, Representative Lanham stated the "squawk" against the project was stimulated by jealousy and rivalry between State and county officials; and by county residents who were opposed to a low-cost veterans' project in an area that might otherwise attract expensive homes.

Lanham also defended the appraisal system of VA and FHA, and blamed the fact that $4000 houses were today being sold for $10,000 on the removal of price and wage controls.

Hearing Set Tuesday In Death of Barber

Lovelace, 34, of the same address, died in Alexandria Hospital just after Wednesday midnight, apparently of injuries suffered in a fight with Delaney seven hours earlier.

Jurists End 8th Annual Parley Here

The eighth annual Judicial Circuit Conference for the District of Columbia was concluded yesterday.

The day was spent with all the jurists of the District Court and the United States Court of Appeals in executive session with reports on the internal workings of the courts.

Meanwhile, President Truman has on his desk for signature the recently passed revision of the Judicial Code, a provision of which would change the title of the Federal jurists here from "justice" to "judge."

Under the code, which has many sections of national importance throughout the Federal system, "justice" will be an appellation applied only to member of the United States Supreme Court bench.

In the other courts there will be no more presidentially appointed chief justices. They will be termed chief judge and will be chosen on the basis of seniority of service. The chief judge will generally be the administrative officer of his court.

Area News in Brief

Prosecutor, Police Chance Witnesses

A robbery attempt right under the disapproving glares of an assistant United States Attorney and two detectives was described in Municipal Court yesterday.

As a result, Avon C. Alexander, 29, of 530 25th pl. ne., and Woodrow Parson, 29, of 1250 8th st. nw., were held in $1000 bond for the grand jury.

Assistant United States Attorney Oliver O. Dibble told the court that he and Detective Sergts. R. E. Talbert and T. A. Sullivan were cruising in a scout car past Mount Vernon Park when he saw the defendants leaning over the sleeping figures of Robert J. Crouch, 27, of 2917 Cathedral ave. nw.

Dibble said he and his companions watched until the defendants dipped hands into Crouch's pocket. Then, the detectives made the arrest, and awakened Crouch to let him know what had happened.

Gambler Fined $300

A retired Alexandria railroad employe was fined $300 yesterday in Alexandria Police Court after pleading guilty to a charge of operating a numbers game. Defendant William A. Athey, 59, 711 Cameron st., also drew a 90-day jail sentence, which was suspended pending good behavior for three years. Police arrested Athey on Wednesday, confiscating numbers slips and $239.50 in cash.

At Police Trial

Officer Kept His Revolver, Cabbie Says

Pvt. Talbert E. Dowling, jr., 38, of the Fifth Precinct, was a policeman with one too many revolvers yesterday.

Dowling went before the Police Trial Board yesterday charged with conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline of the Police Department.

It seems that a cab driver, John Meadows of 4700 East Capitol st., wanted to register his revolver with police. Dowling agreed to have the weapon registered and then return it.

Meadows said he appreciated the favor but got sore when Dowling did not return his revolver.

The policeman said yes, he had taken the gun and registered it. And he carried it around for 30 days, never getting a chance to see Meadows. Dowling said he finally took the revolver to his home, at 1810 2d st. nw., and put it away in the cellar. Now, he said, he can't find it.

Dowling said the revolver was worth about $15. He said he will make one more search for it and if he can't find it will pay Meadows $15.

This was agreeable to the trial board and the charge was dismissed.

Sergt. Benjamin R. Campbell, 46, of the Twelfth Precinct, also faced the board charged with failing to report to the clinic when on sick report March 22, and neglect of duty April 19.

Campbell, who lives at 5901 Eastern ave. ne., argued his case so well that he was let go with a warning on the first charge and won a dismissal of the second charge.

Move to Add Gaming Law Teeth Is Made

Steps to put more teeth in Maryland antigambling laws are being quietly taken by an unofficial association of more than 25 top State police officials, it was revealed yesterday.

Chief goal of the association may be repeal of the House Act, which outlaws court evidence obtained as a result of searching a suspect without a warrant in misdemeanor cases.

Spokesmen for a special committee of the group point out that repeal of the restrictive act would "greatly curtail" gambling activities, as police are now powerless to search a suspected gambler unless they witness an illegal act or have a warrant.

The committee, whose membership includes Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen and Inspector James S. McAuliffe, detective chiefs of Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, respectively, is now preparing a report for submission to the entire group.

If approved, the proposal will be given to the Legislative Council of the Maryland General Assembly for action.

R. Duncan Clark, Bethesda attorney and a State Delegate, described the current study by police officials as "a good start." He said, however, he would be "loath to repeal the law unless there is a serious demand for it."

"The House Act is one of those protective laws American citizens enjoy, and the tendency today is to wipe out more and more of those laws in the name of expediency," he said.

He added that he thought no individual legislator should push for repeal of the law until recommendations are received from the State Police Association, the Association of State's Attorneys, the chief of the State Police and the State attorney general.

Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., head of the Montgomery County legislative delegation, said the law's repeal would be "a good thing if properly used, but it could be abused."

Col. Beverly Ober, State Police superintendent, is acting chairman of the unofficial police association. Cities and counties represented include Baltimore, Hagerstown, Frederick, Salisbury and Cumberland, and Montgomery, Prince Georges and Anne Arundel Counties.

Fairfax Group To Ask Tuck For School Aid

Emergency aid will be asked of Virginia's Gov. William T. Tuck to relieve Fairfax County's critical shortage of school classrooms following action taken last night by a group of county citizens.

The School Emergency Committee of Northern Virginia unanimously adopted a resolution asking for "an emergency grant or loan of funds sufficient to alleviate the present crowded conditions."

The meeting was held in the Annandale School auditorium which has been partitioned to provide two extra classrooms.

The petition, which will be presented to the Governor about July 1, asks him to call a special legislative session if he cannot act on the matter on his own. Copies of the petition will be circulated about the county between now and July 1 to obtain additional signatures.

State Senator Andrew W. Clarke urged a sales tax for the State as "the only way Virginia can carry out its school construction and other needy programs." Clarke had previously been a consistent opponent of a sales tax since his election to the Senate in 1943.

The committee had invited Clarke and other General Assembly members from this area to the meetng to learn what aid might be expected from the State. Other legislators present were State Senator Charles Fenwick and State Delegate George Damm, both of whom opposed a sales tax.

Delinquency Cases Drop, Judge Reports

Juvenile delinquency cases handled in Juvenile Court here fell off during the 1947 fiscal year, but cases involving dependency shot upward to a new high level.

This was brought out in a report released yesterday by Judge Fay L. Bentley of the Juvenile Court. Copies were transmitted to the White House and Congress.

Delinquency complaints, which comprised 83 per cent of the court's work, numbered 2828 last year as compared with 3180 in 1946 and the peak 3667 in 1944. On the other hand, 577 dependency cases were handled last year to 330 the previous year.

Rise Found Typical

"The rise in the number of dependency cases and the drop in delinquency complaints is typical of Juvenile Courts' experience throughout the country," Judge Bentley wrote.

"The instability of many wartime marriages and the marked rise in the birth rate following the war may have some effect upon the number of children coming to the attention of the court on dependency and neglect cases."

Improved housing, better recreational programs and more concentrated pooling of community resources for the care of children were cited as resulting from aroused public interest in juvenile problems. This in turn caused a drop in juvenile delinquency figures.

Two recommendations for improving court procedures were included in the report by Judge Bentley.

Research Needed

She asked for the establishment of a department of statistics and research and for at least two automobiles for the use of probation officers.

Six "community needs" were also listed by Judge Bentley. They were:

Rapid expansion of low cost housing to alleviate the overcrowding and separation of families.

Additonal schools for elementary grades to keep pace with the rapid rise in birth rate.

Increased financial allotment to the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare to provide greater aid to indigent families and prevent their breakup.

Enlargement of the staff of the Protective Service Unit of the Board of Public Welfare to provide case work services for families suffering from neglect of dependents.

Increased funds for the Board of Public Welfare to enable it to secure additional foster homes.

86.5% Found Boys

Of the delinquency complaints handled, 2449, or 86.5 per cent involved boys.

This does not mean, the report continued, that the behavior problems of girls are less serious, but only that the community is more reticent about them.

Stealing was the principal cause for referral of boys to the court.

Next highest reason for referral was "being incorrigible."

The median age of delinquent children was 15, the report stated. For boys it was 15 years and for girls 14. The figures were the same as the previous year.

Probation was given in 643 cases, 80 were dismissed, 18 fined, 4 nolle prossed, 3 committed and 84 continued.

The court collected the largest amount of money in its history, $320,736.52, Judge Bentley wrote. This marked an increase of 20 per cent over the prior year when collections of $265,628.57 were realized.

Of this amount, $315,497.34 was for the support of illegitimate and legitimate dependents. A total of $2167.18 represented restitution and $2867 was in fines and forfeitures and $305 forfeitures of cash bond.

Howard Angry

New School Study Grant Assailed

A congressional appropriation of $100,000 to survey Washington's school needs was described last night as "expensive inaction."

Emphasizing that he spoke only for himself, John M. Howard, chairman of the Washington Board of Trade's committee on education, said he found "it very difficult to understand how anyone could appropriate $100,000 to make another survey" of the District's school situation in the face of the material already available.

Appointment of Dr. George D Strayer, 71, New York City educator, to make a survey was announced Tuesday by Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) and Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), chairmen respectively of the Senate and House subcommittees in charge of the District budget.

Howard's committee recently completed a study of the school system, which concurred in general with the findings of a study made by Gen. Gordon R. Young, engineer commissioner, in June, 1946.

Howard spoke at a meeting of the District of Columbia Public School Association in the District Building last night. George R. Hammond, president, blamed bad weather for a turnout of only 14 of the association's approximately 150 persons.

Howard said that of 173 school properties in Washington approximately one third were built before 1900 and that two thirds of the 173 were more than 25 years old. This, he said, was indicative of the considerable program of remodeling and renovation needed, in addition to new construction to meet the needs of an increased school population.

Chinese Money Drops Another 15% in Value

Shanghai, June 18 (AP).—China's cheap money dropped another 15 per cent in value today.

It took 2,300,000 yuan to get $1 in Shanghai's black market. The official rate is 474,000 to $1.

Commodity prices soared wildly.

To curb wild speculation in money commodities, authorities proposed to forbid using bank checks on the date of issue, and to stop the flow of capital from Peiping and Tientsin—close to the civil war battle zone—to Shanghai.

Dr. Blanding Speaks to AAUW

Group, Racial Tensions Seen as Leading to War

By Genevieve Reynolds

When it comes to group tensions, the Nation's Capital is one of "the sorest spots in the country." So declared Dr. Sarah Blanding, president of Vassar College.

The college head made her assertion yesterday when she shared a platform discussion on "Group Tensions in the American Community" with Dr. Ina Corinne Brown, professor of social anthropology at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn., and lecturer at Vanderbilt and Fisk Universities. Both spoke at the morning session of the American Association of University Women's conference of State presidents, which opened Wednesday at the National Cathedral School for Girls.

Alluding to but not mentioning by name the current racial membership issue between the Washington branch and the national board of the AAUW, Dr. Blanding asserted, "I felt a tremendous satisfaction that one phase of this problem of group tension has been faced by the AAUW board, which has put itself on record as believing that those who meet standards of this organization are entitled to membership whether they be white, black or yellow."

The national association and the District AAUW Chapter are engaged in a controversy over membership rules. It started over the local group's refusal to admit a Negro college graduate.

Referring to group tensions in general, Dr. Blanding said that no one could close their eyes to the tensions in this country, that 30 to 40 newspaper stories on the subject could be noted daily. She cited The Washington Post as one paper pointing out group tensions.

Tensions Bring on War

Dr. Blanding said, "We're facing a third world war because of insufficient progress in the elimination of racial and group tensions. Group tensions, however, are not peculiar to this country but can be found around the world. She attributed the tensions to clefts and cleavages stemming from people of different origins, and economic inequalities.

"Segregation of races constitutes a real danger both here and abroad," she said. "The whole world is watching us. As they see us practicing discriminations they wonder what we mean by democracy."

"They see us treating Chinese and Japanese in ways which no American would be treated in their countries," she continued. "The future of this Nation and the rest of the world depends upon how well we can demonstrate that our moral and social democratic attitudes are impregnable."

Discriminated against in this country, according to the Vassar president, are 13 million Negroes; 2 million Mexicans; one third million of Orientals; 370,000 American Indians, and some 5 million Jews; plus Slavic nationalities.

Negro Problem Most Acute

Dr. Brown called the Negro problem the most acute and difficult to solve because of deep seated prejudices, and pointed out that it has become the Nation's problem as well as that of the South.

"It's dangerous for one region or section to say we are doing so much better than you are in solving group tensions," she asserted, "while at the same time ignoring the problems on their own door step."

For example, she said that "certain cities and regions of the country are far more interested in what happens in Tennessee groups than in solving their own group tension problems."

Dr. Brown said that the North should find it far easier to remove discrimination troubles than the South because it had no definite laws of segregation; whereas segregation in some parts of the South is a law.

To end prejudices and racial tensions, she advocated "starting where you are first as an individual, then at community and State levels.

"If we can do anything about group tensions in the South, you ought to be able to eliminate them anywhere," she explained. "And we are making real progress there.

"One of the most significant movements in the South is the recent policy of putting Negroes on the police force," she continued. "In October, 1947, 41 cities in 10 Southern States were using Negroes on the police force. This has had a very favorable effect in reducing juvenile delinquency and crime."

Dr. Brown cited discrepancies o. school opportunities for whites in the North and South. She called upon the AAUW presidents to consider the matter when requesting Federal aid to education.

Ask Anne About San Francisco Clothes

I hope I may be forgiven for not entirely agreeing with the answer you gave M. B. in your column the other day regarding correct clothing for San Francisco in July and August. As I am from that city, I speak with authority in saying that July is one of the coldest months of the year there because of the penetratingly cold fogs. San Franciscans wear their fur coats all year, and especially in July in the evenings. I was last there in the summer of 1941. I really didn't have the nerve to ask the storage company here to send me my fur coat for the trip, so just took an in-between seasons coat and was definitely cold, particularly in the evenings, which chill you to the bone. Cottons are only worn in the country, not in town. There is always a breeze in San Francisco. The women are usually smartly dressed there.
P. F. S.

Thank you so much for your letter and suggestions, P. F. S. The information in our previous column was from a native Californian, too, but I suppose even natives sometimes disagree on the proper clothing for certain weather. I'm sure your letter will help M. B. to be better prepared for what lies ahead in the city by the Golden Gate.

How can I remove a deep iron burn from my hardwood floor? The floor is badly charred where the iron slowly burned through. Is there any way to bleach or cover this? L. P.

I'm afraid there is no really satisfactory way to bleach or cover this floor spot. Scraping and sanding the burned area until the charred wood is completely removed would work if the burn isn't too deep. Otherwise, it would be necessary to remove the damaged boards and put in new ones.

How can I remove large round white marks from a mahogany desk? I have tried water, furniture polish, and wringing out a damp cloth in vinegar and sponging. Can you suggest anything? R. L.

You may have to try several more remedies before you find one which will completely remove these rings. Try placing a thick clean blotter over the rings and pressing the blotter with a warm (not hot) iron. The iron should not be hotter than you can place your hand to.

If this doesn't remove them, rub finely powdered rottenstone or other scratchless abrasive and light oil into the rings. Use light pressure. When the whiteness is removed, go over the area with a cloth moistened with a camphorated oil. If the rings do not respond at the first treatment, the procedure can be repeated. Then apply several thin coats of paste wax to the desk top, polishing each coat well when thoroughly dry. When a good protective coat is built up on the desk, the chances of white moisture rings developing will be considerably lessened.

GOP's Whimsical Elephant Looks Down From Canopy On Convention's Antics

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 18.—A year ago last May at the Republican National committee meeting in Kansas City, Philadelphia snagged the convention from a complacent Chicago by efficient go-getting. Two hundred thousand in cold cash was laid on the line plus a fifty thousand dollar entertainment fund, and now an unestimated sum is being raised to swell the fun kitty. In addition the city of Brotherly Love offered nifty television tieups from Chicago to Boston. Besides, official largesse businessmen have dug into pockets, come up with some giddy decor. Chestnut st. lampposts, ornamented with national shields inscribed with welcome to individual states, are garlanded together with red white and blue lights.

The Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, headquarters of both Taft and Stassen, has gone whimsical with a huge balloon elephant tethered on the canopy covering the sidewalk in front of the entrance. Like Macys' Thanksgiving parade animals, it stands at least 10 feet high, has startled saucer eyes, a red blanket and manicured toenails.

The local stores have gone elephant beserk. Even antique stores have found an amazing variety of oddments ornamented with pachyderms.

Around the Headquarters

STASSEN and Dewey headquarters are still in a state of flux. Stassen, whose posters appear in every empty window, has taken over the Burgundy Room, one of the hotel's dining rooms. It is strung with flags and photographs separated by enormous banners inscribed with such slogans as "His Leadership Will Build Party Strength," "With Stassen we will win in city, State and Nation," "Nominate the Man the People Want."

Upstairs in the ballroom Dewey's cohorts are fixing up a luxurious headquarters. New York State colors, blue and yellow, billow from the balcony between national flags. Pictures of Dewey activities are pinned to each billow. For the first time women have had the job of organizing the headquarters, and a huge photograph of pretty Mrs. Dewey centers one side. The Dewey ladies have staged a most ambitious headquarters program. Headed by Mrs. Charles W. Weiss, jr., with Mrs. Carl T. Hogan as New York chairman of the Women's Committee for Dewey, they gathered a committee of 120 women from the home State, raised a lavish fund for entertainment. All sorts of objects were donated as souvenirs—chewing gum, cigarettes, cigarette holders, combs, candy. Marvelous door prizes have been rounded up, too, and after Sunday afternoon's reception, everyone will be clocked on entering. About each hundredth person will corral a valuable bit of loot. Since it is rumored that televisions sets by the dozen will be among the prizes, we've planned to whip in and out as often as possible.

Other headquarter's features include 400 volunteer hostesses, a special niche complete with typewriters for newspaper gals, a soft drink bar and a "check bar"—a circular job in the middle of the ballroom where all and every kind of question will be answered.

The Taft headquarters are modest compared to all this glory. Just three rooms on the seventh floor of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. Thursday night only half a dozen people were there, among them Ohio's Governor Herbert and Oregon's Governor Hale. Instead of talking high politics they were sitting on comfortable sofas watching a night baseball game by television. However, Taft fans make up in headquarter's modesty by their enormous butter plate size buttons. The Taft insignia, by the way, is a horticulturally incorrect four-leaf clover with a strange white center.

The Fun High Spot

SO FAR the most humorous happening has been l'affaire This Week. This Week is a small privately printed magazine which sets down where to go, what to do in Philadelphia. Some ten thousand of the issue due today were ordered by Taft headquarters some five thousand by Stassen's boys as giveaways to delegates and friends. Imagine their consternation when quite unknown to them a photograph of Dewey appeared instead of the usual pretty girl cover. Naturally there is nothing to do but destroy them.

Open House Saturday

THE convention entertaining gets underway with a bang Saturday afternoon when the Mayor's Philadelphia Committee for the Republican National Convention throws an open house cocktail party for newspaper, radio and television correspondents at the Pen and Pencil Club. That same evening both Carroll Reece and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pew, jr., are hosting mammoth dinners. They are sort of Siamese Twin affairs. Mr. Reece will entertain the 96 official delegates while oil and political tycoon Pew is inviting the assorted husbands, wives, sweethearts and beaux of the various delegates. Combined with local nabobs the Pews plan to feed some 250. Friday night before the Fourth Annual Philadelphia Music Festival which is sponsored by the Philadelphia Inquirer Charities, Inc., in the Municipal Stadium, Pennsylvania National Committeeman and Mrs. G. Mason Owlett are giving a jumbo buffet supper at the Union League Club. On Sunday the big shots will be divided and fed out on the Main Line by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Eshleman and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Clement. The Eshlemans live in Villanova and Mr. E., a well known advertising executive, is chairman of the Executive Committee while Mr. Clement, who lives in Rosemont, is president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Entertainment Program

ONCE repleted the guests will be stuffed into buses and toted over to Washington's old headquarters at Valley Forge. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Brown will give a buffet supper out in Germantown for the same political stars. Mr. Brown is head of the Brown Instrument Co., takes a keen interest in politics and was once secretary of commerce in the home State government. On Monday, before the convention's official opening, Mr. and Mrs. Clewell Sykes will be hosts at a dinner for former Massachusetts Senator and Mrs. Sinclair Weeks. That afternoon Ohio's Senator and Mrs. John W. Bricker will give a reception for Ohio's Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Interesting preconvention sidelight is the fact that much of the political horse dealing is being done in elegant and very spacious rented apartments and houses instead of smoky hotel rooms. Washington's Col. and Mrs. Bob Guggenheim, for instance, are installed in Mrs. S. H. Jeans' apartment on South 18th st. Rents offered have been staggering. Mr. and Mrs. Emlen Ettigg were bid five hundred dollars for their small house on Panama st. They are staying on though and giving a cocktail party Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Etting's sister and brother-in-law, the John Davis Lodges.

THESE pretty twin sisters were among the 1100 women attending the University of Maryland's Extension Service Short Course at College Park. Left is Mrs. Walter Moon of Baltimore, who completed her third year and saw her twin, Mrs. William Robie of Indian Head, receive a diploma. The latter is president of the Charles County Homemaking Clubs

Short Course Teaches Homemaking

Maryland Farm Women Answer the School Bell

By Peggy Preston

IT'S all over for another year—the annual Rural Women's Short Course at the University of Maryland. And 1100 women are back at their homes in the various counties, weary but happy after a strenuous, week long session of "schoolin'."

Everybody agreed it had been pretty wonderful. For a week, beginning June 14, these women who range in age from 16 to 76, had the run of the beautiful, tree-shaded campus. Members of the State Council of Homemakers Clubs, they were there at the invitation of the Maryland University Extension Service and everything possible had been done to make their stay a memorable one.

For the small outlay of $15 they were fed, housed, entertained and instructed in every phase of homemaking. Their day began at 8:15 and Retreat didn't come until a late hour. Busy every minute of the time, they hiked from classroom to classroom, taking notes on public speaking, cooking, fashion, politics, home decoration, English, news writing and a dozen other subjects. They heard prominent speakers discourse on such topics as the "State of the Union," "Our Stake in Europe," and "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World."

At the conclusion of the week they held a rousing graduation ceremony, when 80 women, clad in white dresses, marched forward to receive diplomas from Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president. Only those who had attended the course for four years were so honored, but undergrads and old grads filled the auditorium for the occasion and made the rafters ring with a rendition of "Maryland, My Maryland."

Receptions, teas and sightseeing tours occupied their few leisure hours and on their own the ladies put on a couple of successful programs. Thursday night they wowed a huge audience of friends and relatives with a "Gay Nineties Revue" when they disported themselves on the Armory stage in authentic period costumes and sang and frolicked through a series of skits.

On Thursday afternoon they held a tea at which they presented an oil portrait of their old friend, Miss Venia M. Kellar, to the university. Miss Kellar, assistant director of the Extension Service, originated the idea of the short course in 1923.

Back in the early years, only a few women could be persuaded to take the course. Now it is impossible to keep them away and the college dormitories were filled to overflowing last week.

"Once you've been here you always come back," was the explanation of Mrs. James Richardson of Cambridge, Md., who was making her eighteenth annual visit. Mrs. Richardson, who cheerfully admitted to a hearty 76 years of age, claimed she wouldn't think o missing a session. Public speaking is her favorite course.

She had lots of company. There were women present from hamlets and farms in Maryland who have a perfect record attendance for 22 years. Others, who in the intervening years have moved to other States, were back for the week.

Their heads crammed with new ideas on cooking and homemaking the "students" scattered yesterday, returning home to acquaint children and husbands with their recently acquired knowledge. Husbands, at least, had been all but for forgotten for a whole week.

"What do you suppose the men have been doing while we've been away," one woman pondered as she made ready for the trip home.

"Yes, I'm beginning to wonder about that too," said her friend.

GRADUATION ceremony at the college Armory was a serious business with the 80 members of the class who had taken the Short Course for four years. Heading the line as they prepare to march into the auditorium is Mrs. Walter Bromley of Smithsburg, Washington County, president of the class, and newly elected president of the Maryland State Council of Homemaking Clubs

CLASSES in clothing interested many of the "students." Here Miss Mildred Flanagan, at left, a Home Demonstration Agent, gives advice on fabric and cut to Mrs. Allen Baker of Grantsville, president of her local club, and Miss Mary Ahalt of Middletown, vice president of the Mid-Valley Club

To Seek Building

College Park, Md., June 18 (AP).—Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, said today that he is going to ask the Governor and the State Legislature next year for a women's activities building for the university.

The university president suggested that the proposed women's activities building have a clubroom for the rural women of Maryland and rooms for mothers to stay when they visit their sons and daughters at the university.

He expressed belief car owners would be concerned more during the next five years with economy and comfort.

C. & O. Net Increases To $4,960,896 in May

Cleveland, June 18 (AP).—The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Co. today reported $4,960,896 net income in May, or 63 cents a common share, compared with $4,330,241, or 55 cents a share, in May of 1947.

Sidelights on History Revealed in Records Of Lutz Company

Our recent discussion of old Washington business houses has moved Mr. and Mrs. John Ade Plugge of 35 Oxford st., Chevy Chase, Md., to do some research on the Lutz leather goods store at 1325 G st. nw.

The firm started as a Georgetown harness shop in 1804. Ledgers dating back to 1840 have been preserved, and tell some interesting stories.

For example, Gen. Robert E. Lee owed a balance of 37 cents when he left Washington to take command of the Confederate Army. Naturally enough, the debt was forgotten in the turmoil that followed.

Abe Lincoln, on the other hand, overpaid his account by 1 cent, and died before he made any more purchases.

And the store's officials were questioned in the investigation which followed Lincoln's assassination—because the spurs which tripped up John Wilkes Booth in that theater curtain were bought at Lutz & Co.

PERSONAL NOTES

V. W. Cashwell, 1849 Mintwood pl. nw.: I'll have an explanatory item about merchant seamen and the AVC in a day or so. No space.

GREEN FOR DANGER

Dorothy M. Kustritz of 1426 M st. nw. is pretty angry with a certain streetcar operator—and I don't blame her.

Dorothy was crossing H st. nw. at 7th st. when the yellow light came on. The streetcar, which had been stopped by a red light, started to move through the intersection prematurely, and almost ran down several pedestrians.

All of which brings up the whole subject of local traffic-light regulations.

In Washington, when the yellow light comes on, traffic keeps right on moving—sometimes until the red has flashed.

Meanwhile impatient motorists on the cross street get a sidelong preview of the impending change, and also start to edge forward.

The result is an ever-present invitation to accidents—both to motorists and pedestrians.

Several cities I know have eliminated this problem in simple fashion—they make the yellow light visible in all directions.

When it follows the green, it means STOP unless you are already in the intersection. When it follows the red it means get ready, but do NOT move.

And these regulations are strictly enforced. Motorists know that the yellow light means business, and they honor it. They don't have to sneak up on it or through it, because it's there for all to see—and heed.

Several warnings have reached me that I will probably be hung by irate members of historical societies, because I suggested that our statues be scrubbed up periodically.

Roy F. Nash of 1235 Randolph st. nw. explains why. He says that "unless metals are plated or painted, they're subject to corrosion.

"Some, like aluminum and chromium, obligingly form protective coatings of the same color as the respective metals. Bronze also forms its own coating, but it is immediately noticed because it happens to be a different color.

"This coating could probably be removed, but if the protective layer were kept off the monuments, the effects of corrosion would badly mar our statues and eventually destroy them."

Besides, members of historical societies are apt to consider these signs of age as aesthetic assets, not to be disturbed by bungling columnists.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Several assorted cats, well cared for; will deliver." (Chestnut 4430 after 6 p. m.)

"Four lovely kittens, recently won prize as 'most popular pets' at Alexandria fair." (Overlook 2193).

MISCELLANY

"Dutch" Bergman has been strangely silent ever since Jerry Strong and I accepted the golf challenge from Dutch and Steve Douglas. Meantime WINX Bandstander Howard Williams says that if Bill Herson is coming along to watch Strong, he'd better turn out to watch Herson . . . The argument about men-versus-women drivers continues: Harry Gale of 319 S. Garfield st., Arlington, Va., points out that we don't get the full story from statistics which show that women have proportionately fewer accidents than men. The ladies seldom drive in bad weather or on tough commercial jobs, as men must—to make a living for the women they criticize . . . Montgomery County mothers have formed the Community Arts Cooperative, and are now taking applications for nonprofit dancing classes for children and adults. Mrs. Lloyd B. McCurdy of 1205 Linden lane, Silver Spring, Md. (Shepherd 5062) can give you all the dope . . . George Van Den Berg of 1460 Irving st. nw. says the baseball announcers sometimes make "Eddie Yost" sound like "adios." . . . When J. Maynard Magruder wrote me recently to tell me about the good work being done in the Arlington Lions Club eye testing program, he addressed his letter to "The Morning Line." The mailman routed it to Walter Haight.

NEW YORK.—This is a Hungarian story told of Ferenc Molnar, of the day he was introduced to the chess champion of Germany and the chess champion of Austria. Molnar knew only the bare rudiments of the game, but he scoffed at their chess talents and was challenged to play them. "I could play both of them, blind-folded," said Molnar. "But that's too easy." He proposed playing simultaneous games against both champions. "They can sit in front of their chess-boards, and I'll sit in the foyer," said Molnar. "I'll play them without seeing the boards. We will send each other notes." . . . Molnar sat in the foyer. The German champion moved first, and sent Molnar a note, describing his move. Molnar copied the note, and sent it to the Austrian champ as his own first move. When the Austrian made the return move, Molnar copied it and sent it to the German as his own move . . . Inevitable result: Molnar, the chess novice, won one game and lost one.

Morton Downey will sing at both the Republican and Democratic conventions . . . The Mystery Song on the "Stop the Music" show at ABC isn't, as most hopefuls think, "The Old Gray Mare." If the person who is called Sunday night answers, "The song is 'Get Out of the Wilderness,'" he'll get the $19,000 prize . . . Charles Boyer, who is on his way to Erance, will introduce Ingrid Bergman, Rita Hayworth and Hedy Lamarr to the President of France and the people of Paris, in a ceremony inside the Arch of Triumph on June 30 . . . Contrary to magazine reports, Elliott Roosevelt's No. 1 candidate still is Eisenhower.

Ted Lewis, now working at a Cincinnati night club, phoned his wife in New York and asked her to buy a gift for "Sleep-out Louie," the veteran Cincinnati night club owner. Mrs. Lewis suggested: "I'll get something initialed. What's 'Sleep-out Louie's last name?" The bandleader replied: "Find out through someone's else. I don't know, and I don't intend to ask a man I've known well for 30 years, 'What's your last name?'" . . . PM's editors now favor changing its name to "The Star" and eventually to 'The Morning Star' . . . The headwaiter at the Hotel Taft's new tap-room in New York will have a walkie-talkie, with which he'll transmit orders directly from customers to kitchen and bar.

Dewey Called Best of GOP Lot

By Drew Pearson

PHILADELPHIA.—Side lights on the Man Who has the Post in the GOP Race for President: Eight years ago, when Thomas E. Dewey first aspired to be President, he was brilliant, bumptious, and 38 years old. Fortunately for us and him, the country was spared the ordeal of a Dewey Administration. Again in 1944, Dewey, then 42 years old, had improved, but still was cantankerous, conceited, not seasoned enough to be President... Those were the days when Dewey worried about his height, had a big book placed behind the rostrum for him to stand on at Oklahoma City, even coached photographers on how to take his picture.

Dewey

DEWEY GROWS UP—Dewey got a letter from Henry Holt the other day: "Tom, get a lift. You're short and stand flat." Dewey wrote back: "Henry, they'll have to take me or leave me as I am." . . . Talking to Dewey, I was surprised to hear him joke about himself during the hectic 1944 campaign. "The mistakes I made in that race," Dewey said in effect, "helped make a man of me. You don't know what experience is until you have run for President." . . . Then Dewey paid a tribute to Roosevelt: "When I look back on Roosevelt's long years in office and realize how easily graft can creep in, I must pay tribute to his record of administration."

CONFESSION—In the past, I confess, I never liked Dewey. Now I do . . . Mrs. Kenneth Simpson, wife of Dewey's earliest political booster, once said: "You've really got to know Tom Dewey to dislike him." But that was some time ago. Now Dewey improves with knowing, as he has improved with age.

RATING THE CANDIDATES—Of the active GOP candidates today I regard Tom Dewey as the best qualified to be President of the United States. (This does not include such inactive candidates as modest Governor Warren of California who will be discussed in a later column.) . . . I give Dewey this rating for the following reasons: (1) He has been an excellent Governor of New York; (2) He has shown good judgment in picking good men; (3) His record with labor and minority groups is satisfactory; (4) He has weathered the buffeting of political experience and benefited from it.

DEWEY GESTAPO? — One thing that once worried me about Dewey was his cutthroat tactics as a New York prosecutor. He rode roughshod over civil liberties, held witnesses in jail for weeks . . . Of course, cleaning up New York gangsterdom is tough, but even so, the Nation's basic liberties can't be flouted . . . Would Dewey, as President, set up a Nation-wide Gestapo? A lot of people have asked about that . . . A lot of people also got the answer, I think, from Dewey's debate with Stassen. Taking the unpopular side of the debate, Dewey showed a basic tolerance and liberalism which I wasn't sure he had before. Communism, he argued, has got to be wiped out by making the American system better, not by throwing political unbelievers into jail.

FINANCIAL GODFATHER—If Dewey enters the White House his fiscal policies will be dominated by his good friend, Winthrop Aldrich, head of the Chase National Bank and a member of the Rockefeller clan. They have long been close . . . Aldrich belongs to the old school of blue-stocking New York Republicans who believe that the Government should be run well, but primarily for themselves.

FOREIGN POLICY—Dewey's Secretary of State probably would be John Foster Dulles—which would be a tragedy. Few men did more to build up Germany after World War I, few sowed a more tragic though unwitting harvest for younger men to reap, and now seems hell-bent on building up Germany all over again. . . . Dulles' appointment as Secretary of State would leave a sour taste with France (where Dulles so recently flirted with DeGaulle), in Italy where he is linked with Franco Spain, and with all of the middle-of-the-road European groups who constitute our best bulwark against communism.

CAUTIOUS TOM—Dewey has been called more names than the average politician. Alice Longworth called him: "The Little Man on the Wedding Cake." Harpers captioned him: "The Man in the Blue Serge Suit," while Harold Ickes referred to him as the candidate "who had thrown his diaper in the ring." . . . Dewey has quit wincing at these jabs, but he is still cautious about anything that might bring criticism. He watches the weather vanes, the Gallup Polls, gets a fistful of advice from his Brain Trust before embarking on major moves . . . If the Republicans pick him next week, and six months later Thomas E. Dewey is sitting in the White House he will operate exactly the opposite from Harry Truman. Instead of snap decisions from hard-drinking, meagre-brained aides, Dewey will formulate policy only after a group of earnest experts sit up half the night debating. His decisions may be slow, but they will be very carefully worked out.

Boys Out Fishing

By James J. Metcalfe

We took the boys out fishing and . . . They really got their wish . . . Because it was not long before . . . They caught a lot of fish . . . Our Donnie hooked his share of them . . . And he was proud and glad . . . While Jimmie's haul exceeded all . . . The dreams he ever had . . . We dropped our lines until at last . . . The fish would bite no more . . . And then we pulled up anchor and . . . We headed back to shore . . . The outing was a great success . . . And it was lots of fun . . . Especially for Jimmie dear . . . Who caught the biggest one . . . In fact he keeps on telling how . . . He brought that bass to bay . . . And by his own description it . . . Gets bigger every day.
